Don't panic – but 'killer' mosquitoes discovered on marshes

By Chris Murphy
editorial@kosmedia.co.uk

COLONIES of 'killer' mosquitoes have been discovered in Kent.

Experts have made sightings on the north Kent marshes, but have assured residents there is no need to panic as the West Nile virus they are known to carry is not in the UK – yet.

They found the Culex modestus at Elmley National Nature Reserve, on the Isle of Sheppey, and Cliffe marshes areas, and predict the population will expand quickly.

Dr Miles Nunn from the Centre for Ecology and Hydrology in Oxford, assured the people of Kent there is no risk of them dropping dead from mosquito bites as the virus has still only reached as far as southern Europe.

The discovery was made accidentally. Dr Nunn's student Nick Golding was in the county as part of his research when he spotted a mosquito that looked different from others he knew well.

Taking samples back to Oxford, they were identified by matching their genetic material with others from southern France.

Dr Nunn said Culex modestus is best known for being a carrier of West Nile disease, first identified in Uganda in 1937. It quickly moved to the USA, but so far has not been seen in the UK.

It's widely believed the disease is spread when a mosquito bites an infected bird, and then bites a human. Most sufferers will suffer unpleasant symptoms like fever, headache, and vomiting.

But in a few cases severe forms of the disease, usually called West Nile encephalitis can cause comas, and in rare extreme cases brain damage, permanent muscle damage and even death.

Bug hasn't been seen in the UK since end of World War Two

Dr Nunn said: "We are no where near that stage in Kent. These mosquitoes can carry West Nile, but these don't, so no health risks to the population."

"That is not to say it won't change in the future, which is why we need to keep monitoring the situation."

The molecular parasitologist speculated they arrived in Kent via the thousands of cargo containers arriving on ships at Kent ports every year, but hadn't been seen in the UK since the end of World War Two.

University of Oxford post-graduate student, Nick Golding said: "It is unclear how long this variety has been breeding in the UK – the new specimens

DANGER ZONE: The mosquito was found along north Kent marshes were found during field studies in 2010 and 2011 – but it seems likely that the species has arrived fairly recently."

He spotted the larvae during research into mosquito community ecology – how different mosquito species interact with other aquatic creatures.

Mt Golding said: "I thought it looked a bit different. I was lucky to be looking for larvae because the adults of this species are much trickier to identify. In the UK, the mosquito's biting habits and ability to transmit West Nile virus have yet to be investigated."

The Health Protection Agency has confirmed the presence of Cx. modestus in its own adult samples, trapped close to Mr Golding's study site.

Dr Nunn added: "Their bite is not worse than any other mosquito – but that depends on the person's reaction to the bite."

"The reason why we have reported this in the way we have is it a new mosquito, it is suspected of being the main vector (carrier) of West Nile virus in southern Europe and so in the event of West Nile virus appearing in this country, it would be of significance that there is a population of Culex modestus in the north Kent marshes."

He said there is no chance of the disease being passed from human to human: "It absolutely requires a mosquito to vector it, and humans are regarded as a dead-end host."

The Stockholm-based European Center for Disease Prevention and Control monitors disease in the European Union, and warned last year that West Nile had been found in southern Europe. It said 96 confirmed human cases were reported in the EU; two-thirds of them in Greece and others in Hungary, Italy and Romania.

AIRPORT

Bowles says north Kent would become 'strip of tarmac' if airport got go ahead

By Marijke Cox

marijke.cox@archant.co.uk

SWALE'S town hall leader has warned that north Kent would become a strip of tarmac for housing if plans for a Thames Estuary airport were given the green light.

Andrew Bowles said while he accepted the economic impact a new airport could have on the area, he stressed there were not enough houses to accommodate people moving to the area for jobs at the proposed hub.

"If you look at employment numbers you need to encompass how many new houses would be needed," he said.

"We would have to tarmac over the whole of north Kent to provide housing."

A formal consultation is being held by the government, starting next month, looking at future UK aviation – including controversial proposals for a hub airport in the Thames Estuary.

London Mayor Boris Johnson backs

the idea for an estuary airport and architect Lord Foster has developed proposals for a four-runway transport hub to replace Heathrow on the north Kent coast.

Cllr Bowles, who is against the plans, welcomed the consultation.

"I'm pleased it is going ahead. If the government had made a decision without having a consultation there is every possibility along the line that flaws would have been found."

He stressed that any operation in the Thames Estuary was too expensive and environmentally damaging.

"Everyone will respond to this consultation," he said.

"All the time there is expansion in air travel it (the Thames Estuary) will be spoken about."

"But I'm increasingly coming across more and more people who are choosing not to holiday abroad."

"For example, there's increasing difficulty of getting through airports due to increased security."

Kent County Council also welcomed the consultation, stating it would "put an end to speculation".

Deputy leader at County Hall Cllr Alex King said: "Building a new airport on land or sea in the Thames Estuary will cause significant environment problems, and the case has not been proven that this is the correct solution to the issue."

"KCC is very pleased that there will be a consultation on the proposed Thames Estuary airport to give everybody interested an opportunity to have their say on record and to put an end to speculation."

Plans put forward involve an airport being built on partly reclaimed land and on either an island or peninsula.

Environmentalists, Medway Council and north Kent MPs including Mark Reckless, MP for Rochester and Strood, Sittingbourne and Sheppey MP Gordon Henderson, and Tracey Crouch, MP for Chatham and Aylesford, are against the proposals.

Turbine giant approached in move to take on Thamesteel site as task force is formed

By Marijke Cox
marijke.cox@archant.co.uk

WIND turbine giant Vestas has been approached by council chiefs with a view to the Danish firm potentially taking on the stricken Thamesteel site.

Both the leader of Swale Borough Council, Andrew Bowles, and Kent County Council's cabinet member for regeneration and economic development, Kevin Lynes, said they had contacted the company explaining the current situation at the Sheerness steelworks.

It was announced last month that Thamesteel was going into administration, leaving 350 people redundant.

A number of companies have expressed an interest in taking on the site. Cllr Bowles and Cllr Lynes also approached Vestas.

Thamesteel is located near land due for the development of a major manufacturing site by Vestas, which could create 2,000 jobs.

A planning application was submitted last month, confirming the company was pushing ahead with plans.

Cllr Lynes said: "I contacted Vestas about the problem at Thamesteel. Not wanting to put words in their mouth, but I could see it would be of potential interest to have a steelworks across the way from where they are producing turbines."

Cllr Bowles also told Your-Swale he had contacted the firm, explaining the situation at Thamesteel.

But Cllr Lynes, who is chair of a new task force set up to help the redundant workers, said while he was hoping a company would come in and takeover the site, his first priority was to secure redundancy pay for the 350 staff.

They face up to eight weeks with no pay, leaving many facing financial hardship.

KCC held a meeting with union representatives and government figures to discuss a way forward for the Sheerness steelworks.

Cllr Lynes said: "KCC was asked to set up a task force and our priority is helping those workers wandering around Sheerness with no jobs and no money. Putting together a task force means getting everyone about the table, getting rid of bureaucracy and coming up with ideas.

"We are able to look at the support each of us can provide and make sure the workers get access to the help they need in the quickest, most efficient way.

"Among the actions we have agreed is to provide a 'help' desk at the local Gateway in Sheerness for people to go to for advice on a wide range of issues, and setting up a local job club to provide an area where people can get support looking for work.

"We will also be calling on local employers to take those apprentices and HNC students that have lost their placements at the Sheppey site, so that they can use their extensive skills and experience and complete their qualifications.

"We will also ask government to speed up the process of getting redundancy money to the workers.

STRICKEN: 350 people where made redundant when it was announced Thamesteel would be going into administration Regional representative for the Community union, Ryan Slaughter, added: "We discussed whether there are ways that local people, local agencies, government departments and the county council can work together to support these people.

"I am optimistic that the task force can help support the workers with their immediate needs, such as helping them access funds so that they can put food on the table."

➔ Abbey dog mess fury

PET owners are being told to clean up their act after street wardens collected more than 100 bags of dog mess from the grounds of Minster Abbey.

Warden Geraldine Chidley said: "This is an absolutely appalling situation. There really is no excuse for dog owners to be so irresponsible, the abbey has at least one dog waste bin and two litter bins." To report anyone spotted failing to clean up after their dog call 01795 417850.

➔ Nine saved by college

NINE apprentices who lost their jobs when Thamesteel went into administration have been taken on by MidKent College.

It means they will be able to complete their apprenticeships while working in the college's plumbing, engineering, electrical installation and motor vehicle departments. Five will be based at the Medway campus and four at Maidstone. It follows Thamesteel's collapse into administration last month.

➔ Help book swap event

SHOPPING centre the Forum is to hold a book swap event next month - and is appealing for any unwanted books to be donated in order for there to be a wide choice.

Allen Forder, centre manager of the Sittingbourne shopping complex, said: "Getting members of the local community interested in literature is invaluable and the book swap is a great way to discover a new book which you can't put down. All donations will be gratefully received and used in the event. Any remaining books will be donated to a local charity".

ART

Regeneration project using artistic approach to brighten up borough

A HOST of leading artists will be holding residencies in venues in Sittingbourne, Queenborough, Sheerness and Faversham as part of a major new project.

Art at the Centre, a scheme funded by the local council, Arts Council South East and Kent County Council which looks to aid regeneration through creativity, has commissioned a series of temporary workspaces for artists to work.

Called Space Invaders, it will take place between now and the middle of March.

The artists will be working at Swale House in Sittingbourne, Blue Town Heritage Centre in Sheerness, the Queenborough Castle Connections community centre, and TS Hazard, the Sea Cadet training centre in Faversham.

It will be funded by the Arts Council and KCC.

It is hoped the scheme will deliver a set of innovative artwork as well as form a pilot model for the future provision of art spaces across Swale.

Council leader Andrew Bowles said: "This is an exciting programme of creative events throughout the borough - on the island, in Sittingbourne and in Faversham.

"All of the artists will be reflecting the sense of place and history which makes Swale so special. Although tight budgets have meant that Swale has not been able to offer direct funding, we have been pleased to help and support behind the scenes."

Among the artists taking part will be Lucy Steggals in Blue Town, Juneau Projects in Queenborough, Luce Choules in Faversham, Jeanine Woollard at Swale House, and Simona Paintieri who will be working with youngsters at Sheppey Academy.

Swale Borough Council put out an invitation for artists to take part at the end of last year.

MP calls for law change after traumatic stories from victims of stalking

By Marijke Cox

marijke.cox@archant.co.uk

MP GORDON Henderson has played a key role in calling for a major reform of stalking laws – but a woman whose daughter was killed by an obsessed ex-boyfriend says support schemes must be in place if it is to make a difference.

Recommendations into the reform of stalking laws were published by an independent Parliamentary panel this week.

It concluded the existing laws on harassment and stalking are not “fit for purpose” and that fundamental reform is needed.

Specifically, the report’s recommendations call for an offence of stalking to be introduced into legislation in England and Wales without delay.

The report also calls for fundamental changes to training, risk assessment of victims and treatment of offenders.

Critically the report also calls for the establishment of a Victims’ Advocacy Scheme to signpost and support victims of stalking through the criminal justice system.

The inquiry panel consisted of 15 members including the Sittingbourne and Sheppey MP Mr Henderson.

Mr Henderson, who heard harrowing evidence from victims who described their lack of confidence in the criminal justice system and their fears that complaints were not taken seriously, said: “Stalking is a crime, like rape, that has a disproportionate affect on women.

“But unlike rape, it has never been clearly defined in English law, which has meant that stalking has made the lives of a large number of women a misery, with offenders getting away with their harassment.

“Our Bill seeks to define stalking in such a way that offenders will be able to be prosecuted.

“In addition, those working in the justice system will be better trained to identify stalking and bring culprits to book.”

But Tricia Bernal, from Tunbridge Wells, mother of a young woman shot dead by a stalker, said a new law making stalking a specific offence would not work unless a support system was in place for victims and offenders.

Her daughter, Clare, was just 22 when she was shot dead in 2005, by Michael Pech while she worked in top London store Harvey Nichols. The pair had dated briefly, but when she called the relationship off he started harassing her as he refused to accept it was over. He had already been arrested for breaking a restraining order and found guilty of harassment but committed the crime while awaiting sentence.

Pech shot Miss Bernal four times before turning the gun on himself.

Her mother set up the Protection Against Stalking charity alongside the mothers of other victims. It was their campaign which sparked a parliamentary inquiry.

REFORMS: MP Gordon Henderson (above) and Clare Bernal (inset) who was killed by her stalker

Ms Bernal said: “The law could be changed overnight, but we wouldn’t want that to happen.

“We want it to be a law that works. It will only be successful if we have steps in place that not only helps victims, but ensures treatment is given to offenders. It’s all very well giving harsher sentences, but if there is no proper psychological assessment in place, it won’t work.

“The stalker is more likely to sit in prison and mull it over and get angrier – it’s not going to achieve anything. That’s exactly what happened with Clare.

“There needs to be a treatment programme. Offenders almost need to be reprogrammed to make them realise that stalking is not acceptable behaviour.

“This kind of work is carried out for domestic violence. And like with domestic violence victims, those affected by stalking need to have support too. It’s vital this is in place if a new law comes in.”

Media group strengthens top team as it plans for the future

THE managing director of this newspaper is expanding his role as the company looks to create new products for readers and advertisers.

Paul Stannard, the founder of KOS Media in 2002, is starting in the new role of Group Business Operations Director for our parent company Archant, from Monday.

In his new role he will be based at Archant KOS Media's offices in Ashford, where he will continue to be involved in future business developments and acquisitions.

As part of these changes, Archant KOS Media will be getting the benefit of added senior management experience with the appointment of Mike Deedigan as publisher in Kent.

Mr Deedigan said: “I am looking forward to working in Kent with such an experienced and talented team.

“There are so many opportunities to be explored in the Garden of England, and I hope to build on the relationships and award-winning reputation that have been built up over the last decade.”

Mr Deedigan has a wealth of experience running newspapers, magazines, and websites, and he will work with the existing senior management team to develop these services for readers and advertisers.

Heavy snow brings fun as cold snap shows

Pictures: PAUL JERREAT

PLUNGING temperatures brought winter to the area this week after heavy snow on Saturday night was followed by ice during the week.

Several inches of the white stuff fell over Saturday night and in the early hours of Sunday morning – bringing delight to youngsters and the young at heart.

Fortunately, it also gave council chiefs the chance to ensure main roads were cleared in time for Monday morning's return to work.

On Sunday, heavy snow caused problems getting onto Sheppey until roads were closed, with hundreds of side roads left impassable. But a convoy of gritting trucks worked tirelessly to keep the main routes clear, and it appears they were successful – a far cry from last year.

Forecasters warn the icy temperatures will last throughout the coming week.

Dramatic rescue as yacht saved in blizzard

LIFEBOAT crews faced blizzard conditions and zero visibility in a dramatic five-hour rescue in the early hours of Sunday morning.

The Sheerness emergency crew took to the water after receiving calls a yacht with two people on board had broken down.

The 32-foot craft Katrina had suffered machinery failure more than 20 miles off the coast of Sheppey.

Lifeboat crew members, who set off at 12.25am, found themselves battling strong winds, a heavy swell and blizzard conditions as they fought to find the stricken craft with the weather at times causing zero visibility.

The yacht was found 22 miles north east of Warden Point.

Both people onboard were found unhurt and the yacht was towed back to the lifeboat station at Queenborough.

All returned safely at 5.05am.

Coxswain Robin Castle said: "The weather conditions were horrendous, with driving horizontal snow. I'm full of praise for our volunteer lifeboat crew."

POLICE

Government's one-off grant allows police to freeze council tax bills

By Marijke Cox

marijke.cox@archant.co.uk

KENT Police Authority has announced a freeze on police council tax in what is expected to be the toughest financial year yet for the force.

Members agreed unanimously to keep the precept, its part of the council tax, as it was and to instead accept a one-off grant from the Government of £2 million to cover the gap in funding for 2012-13.

KPA chair Ann Barnes admitted the forthcoming financial year would be the hardest yet, with savings needed of £20m.

It forms the biggest portion of the £50m savings required by Kent Police over four years. Around £7m was saved in 2011-12; £20m is needed for the upcoming 2012-13; £12m for 2013-14; and £13m for 2014-15.

"The £50m is what we're not going to be getting in (government) grants," said Mrs Barnes.

"It's hard and very challenging, but we've been preparing for this for quite some time and confident we can do this without cutting services.

"A one-year grace in council tax will help hard-pressed families and this decision means that those who are struggling are not burdened with any more financial worry."

A budget of £274m was set at the police authority meeting – around £1.5m is spent annually to run KPA – with the average band D household paying £2.67 a week for policing services.

Mrs Barnes said: "Every department has to make efficiency savings and we have to find better ways of doing things for less money.

"At the end of the day the thing that costs organisations the most is people. By March, 2015, we will have 500 fewer police officers and 1,000 fewer staff. We're not getting away from that.

"What we have to do is make sure that the people we have are used to the best capacity."

Mrs Barnes said she was confident the force would continue to deliver savings without affecting services.

"People always say these are challenging times, but there are always wonderful opportunities in times of challenge," she said.

Last year the county was split into three policing divisions – West, North, and East – and a new appointment system was introduced to enable victims of crime to see an officer at a time and place of their choosing.

Mrs Barnes said: "We've got hundreds of extra officers in our neighbourhoods; the new 101 number is in place where everyone now knows who to call.

"The force in Kent has been remodelled – I'm confident that because we started planning early we can meet the financial challenges."

She added: "The authority will continue to monitor the force to ensure it continues to deliver the best possible policing service for the taxpayers of the county."

This will be the last budget set by KPA, as elections are planned for November to choose the county's first Police and Crime Commissioner.

Woman in 70s dies after her car hits tree

POLICE have appealed for witnesses after a woman injured in a crash in Canterbury died in hospital on Tuesday. The woman, in her 70s, was a passenger in a Nissan Note involved in a collision in Hales Drive, Canterbury, on Wednesday, January 25, just after 2pm. The car was turning from Manwood Avenue into Hales Drive when it was involved in a minor collision with a bike and then hit a tree. Two men in the car and the female cyclist were treated for minor injuries.

TOURISM

It's not too late to apply for your free tickets to explore county's gems

THERE are just a few days left to apply for free My Kent Big Weekend tickets to 123 of the county's top visitor attractions and experiences.

The website, www.mykentbigweekend.co.uk, will close for applications on midnight, Monday, February 13.

From historic castles, steam trains and wildlife parks to football matches and art courses, there are more than 15,000 free tickets, two per Kent household, available to suit all tastes.

Attractions taking part include Deal Castle, Dartford FC, Spa Valley Railway, Eagle Heights and Sandhurst Vineyards.

The 2012 My Kent Big Weekend, which is being held on March 17-18, marks the climax of the first English Tourism Week in the county.

And, for the first time, Kent is celebrating its cross-Channel connections. A major draw for visitors to the county, My Kent Big Weekend includes coach trips from France to attractions in Kent, and also from the county to Nord Pas De Calais for their similar celebrations the following weekend, thanks to Eurotunnel and Eurotunnel.

Sandra Matthews-Marsh, chief executive of Visit Kent which organises the annual celebration of the county's tourism, leisure and hospitality businesses, said: "This is our sixth major event for people showcasing our industry and I am delighted the variety of attractions opening their doors for free has increased every year.

"It is this variety – from our iconic heritage sites and gardens to our watersports, theatres, creative experiences and community initiatives – that makes our county such a popular destination for 56 million visitors every year.

"Because My Kent Big Weekend free tickets are allocated on a ballot system after the website closes, there is absolutely no advantage in being either the first or the last to apply for any destination or event.

"This means everyone has plenty of time to browse through all the attractions at their leisure and really focus on where they would like to explore or experience and talk it through with their friends and family."

People without internet access can apply for free My Kent Big Weekend tickets at visitor information centres across the county.

CRIME

Four boys arrested as police crackdown on string of crimes

By James Benjamin

yourswale@kosmedia.co.uk

A GANG of teenagers were apprehended by plain clothes police officers after a co-ordinated operation against a spate of crimes in Upchurch.

Police became concerned after identifying a number of similar thefts from the area and sent out a team to investigate.

Officers went out on the night of Saturday, January 28, to investigate the reports of theft and burglary – and four boys were nabbed.

This came about after the plain-clothed team stopped and searched a van on Old Ferry Road, Iwade.

As a result, a 14-year-old boy from Maidstone was charged with theft and going equipped to steal.

A 16-year-old boy from Sit-tingbourne and two boys aged 16 and 17 from Maidstone were charged with going equipped to steal.

Detective Constable Murray Tester from Kent Police explained: "Having identified a number of thefts across Upchurch that were all quite similar, we sent a number of patrols to operate covertly in the area to put a stop to the offences.

"As a result we have charged four people with going equipped to steal.

"The vehicle they were using has been seized as it is suspected to have been used in crime.

"We will continue to monitor and patrol Upchurch actively.

"We would always recommend that the public keep valuable items locked up as securely as possible.

"However, they should be reassured that we are working hard to target thieves and put them before the courts to reduce the number of people who become a victim of crime."

All four of those charged have been bailed to appear before Maidstone Youth Court on Monday, February 13.

HERE TO STAY: The Queen will reign over Britain well into the future, says the Lord Lieutenant of Kent Viscount De L'Isle

DIAMOND JUBILEE

Throw a party for the Queen, but she doesn't want you to break the bank

By Chris Murphy

editorial@archant.co.uk

IT'S the Lord Lieutenant of Kent's job to ensure the Queen is kept safe at all times when she is in the county, and Viscount De L'Isle believes she will be on the throne for "many years" to come.

As the Queen marked the 60th anniversary of her accession to the throne on Monday, the Viscount, born Philip Sidney, said she is worth every penny of the £1 each we annually spend on the monarchy.

The Queen's representative in Kent said: "The Queen has completed 60 years as our monarch, the only other to reign as long was Queen Victoria.

"During her reign the Queen has moved with the times and modernised the way she rules over us as our head of state.

"The Queen still takes an active part in affairs of state in this country and nations of the commonwealth.

"She has received 11 new Prime Ministers, all of whom have greatly appreciated her wise advice. The current Prime Minister was born 14 years after the Queen's accession. Constitutional monarchy suits this country and still remains relevant in the 21st century.

"During the Jubilee celebrations this summer the Queen has expressed a wish that no great expense is made on her behalf, rather that communities should get together on Sunday, June 3, for a Big Lunch, be that a street party, or an event on the village green.

"The nation is exceptionally lucky to have a monarchy that costs them less, annually, than £1 per head of population, and gives great pleasure to thousands of people, as we all saw demonstrated during the Queen and Duke of Edinburgh's visit to Margate last November.

"During her visit the Queen met veterans, talked to shopkeepers in the old town, who are seeing a revival in their fortunes, and toured the new Turner Contemporary gallery, before visiting the lifeboat station, taking great interest in all the people she met and the things she saw.

"Apart from the Big Lunch I am keen we should all embrace the Diamond Jubilee Beacons. We have a proud history of firing warning beacons across Kent, dating from 16th century, when the Spanish Armada sailed up the English Channel. To date for this Jubilee 85 beacons across Kent have been registered with the Queen's Pageant master."

Home for Viscount De L'Isle is Penshurst Place, near Tonbridge. He was appointed a Deputy Lieutenant of Kent in 1996 and Vice Lord Lieutenant in 2002, taking up his appointment as Lord Lieutenant of Kent on September 1, 2011.

RETAIL

Forum's flip side to shopping with in-house pancake relay

By Chris Britcher

chris.britcher@archant.co.uk

SHOPPERS at The Forum will be going flipping crazy on pancake day with a special event at the retail complex.

The Sittingbourne shopping centre is on the hunt for Swale's pancake flipping champions and will be staging a contest on Shrove Tuesday – February 21.

Teams of three are invited to come along and have a go in a pancake flipping relay.

The winners will be the team who can flip the most pancakes within 60 seconds.

Whoever triumphs will be awarded the Pancake Trophy.

Allen Forder, centre manager at The Forum, said: "Flipping pancakes on Shrove Tuesday is a British tradition so the competition should certainly provide a bit of fun for our shoppers."

The event gets under way at 12.30pm and competitors are told to meet outside the Purple Peach – which will be providing the pancakes for the event.

Participants can register

It is the latest event at the shopping centre which recently gave away £10 notes to surprised shoppers as a thank you for their support.

However, many thought there was a catch and turned the money down.

FIRE

Meal began house fire

CHOPS left under the grill prompted an emergency rescue by fire crews in Faversham on Tuesday.

A resident in Goldfinch Close had put the meat in to cook – then left them unattended and fell asleep. They started to burn and sent smoke billowing, only for the man's smoke alarm to be triggered and prevent a potential tragedy.

It alerted neighbours who called 999.

Fire crews arrived and entered the building, to find the resident still asleep.

The man wasn't seriously hurt and there was no major damage to the property.

JOBS

Push on apprentices

THE council has renewed its call for employers to look at the benefits of taking on apprentices as National Apprenticeship Week ends today.

The fifth annual event aims to promote the advantages of employing and supporting apprentices in the workplace.

Swale council recently challenged local employers to recruit apprentices through the 100 in 100 scheme, which saw 70 businesses pledge 96 apprenticeship opportunities, with 55 starts in 40 businesses in 2011. For details ring the council's economic development team on 01795 417398 or email edu@swale.gov.uk.

POTATOES

Baked, boiled, fried or mashed... there's nothing humble about our spuds' history

By Chris Murphy

editorial@kosmedia.co.uk

THE humble spud has come a long way since Sir Walter Raleigh was associated with the first ones to arrive in Britain, and Kent has been at the centre of that history.

That's according to a new book that in part traces the county's link with the kitchen staple, proving it's a long way from having its chips.

Alan Wilson is a Kent-born author who looked closely at the country's links with the spud. He said the Arran Comet variety was once the mainstay of the early potato trade in Thanet and Romney Marsh.

As he publishes his book The People's Potatoes, he said: "This was the new potato I grew up with in Sittingbourne and Maidstone – stocks were grown only a few miles away.

"I recall the freshness and vitality of the stock, peaking at the Whitsun festival, and a welcome purchase after the tired main crop supplies in May."

Mr Wilson points to Ed Parker, from J Paine and Sons based in Romney Marsh, as a leading inspiration when it comes to potatoes.

Mr Parker, who has seen many dramatic changes in how potatoes from the farm get to market, said: "In the 1970s we harvested daily during June and July into 55lb bags.

"All the potatoes were hand-lifted and at the peak season 100 lorries a week were departing for the London markets and beyond.

Kent was a really important new potato-to source for the UK. This market has now all gone, although we still grow potatoes for the supermarkets."

And today, much of the work is automated with vast machinery used to pick and sort.

Mr Wilson's book celebrates the sheer variety of the British potato, and is published as growers realise the value of 'potato days' which give the public the chance to sample varieties they may otherwise miss out on.

Mr Wilson said it is now time for farmers to plant their crops for this year's growing season.

He said the book aims to become a definitive guide to spuds and even a must-have reference for buying or growing your own.

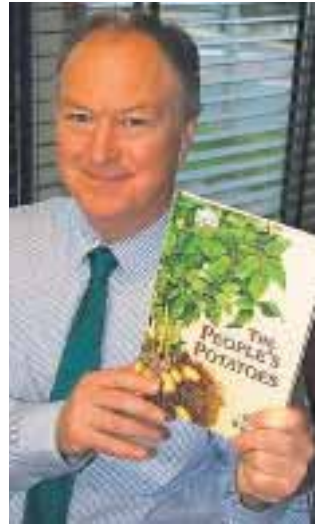

In the book, Mr Wilson details his top 100 varieties which are lavishly illustrated with exclusive colour oil paintings by artist Caroline Bletsis.

He said: "There are a further 300 varieties featured, along with dozens of tips learned from my own experience and more than 30 years' technical expertise, working for Waitrose, the last 15 have been as its technical manager for agronomy.

"This book is a labour of love and the culmination of three years in the making. I like to grow many of the varieties in my back garden, which should help others to do the same.

"Growing potatoes is easy, it's cheap and it's fun. I hope my new book will inspire readers to have a go at growing different varieties, as well as being a valuable resource for everyone in the potato industry."

He also gives a comprehensive insight into current agricultural issues such as GM crops, soil condition, water use, food waste and intensive farming.

Mr Wilson is a keen advocate for organic farming and has served on many governmental and non-governmental working groups.

HEALTH

Don't be ignorant of meningitis

By Chris Murphy

yourswale@kosmedia.co.uk

AFTER a week of plunging temperatures, health chiefs are warning Swale residents to be on the look-out for a lethal strain of the brain bug meningitis.

Bacterial meningitis can kill within hours and now is the peak time for cases to emerge.

Health chiefs are calling on people to be aware and to know how to identify the symptoms early in order to receive the rapid treatment necessary.

The peak season generally ends in March, but with the current cold snap lowering defences, the Meningitis Trust wants to get the message out now.

A spokesman for the trust, which helps support those who have had their lives affected by the illness, said: "We are urging people to know all the symptoms to look out for after a survey found that up to 34 million adults in the UK believe the main symptom of meningitis is a rash – this is a misconception that could be putting lives at risk."

The Meningitis Trust is campaigning to stop this deadly lack of knowledge. Symptoms can appear quickly and rapid deterioration is a sign of a medical emergency.

It can start with 'flu like' symptoms. Those to look out for are a fever, headache, vomiting and muscle pain.

Other symptoms can include fever with cold hands and feet, drowsiness, confusion, pale blotchy skin, stiff neck, dislike of bright lights and seizures.

In babies, symptoms can also include being floppy and unresponsive, dislike of being handled, rapid breathing, a moaning cry and a bulging fontanelle, which is the soft spot on the top of the head.

The trust used national statistics to analyse the risk of those in Swale from contracting meningitis. It found that in Sittingbourne, around 440 people could be struggling to cope with the life changing after-effects of the illness – and every year another eight people in the area could find themselves fighting the impact of the devastating disease.

On the Isle of Sheppey the number is 303 people affected, with five new cases each year.

This is based on 0.8 per cent of the population, which is the UK average.

David Light, community development officer of the trust in the south east, said: "We are urging everyone to be aware of all the symptoms."

"Knowing and recognising the other signs and symptoms of meningitis and getting medical help quickly are vital in reducing the devastating impact meningitis can have."

Some 10 per cent of all cases end in death, and 15 per cent will leave a victim disabled in a matter of hours.

"After-effects can include brain damage, loss of hearing and sight, cerebral palsy, epilepsy and, where septicaemia has occurred, loss of limbs and scarring to the skin tissue.

■ Visit www.meningitis-symptoms.co.uk for more information about symptoms in babies, children and adults.

HOW TO GET HELP

If you suspect meningitis or septicaemia, get medical help immediately. You can:

- Call NHS Direct/NHS 24 or your GP.
- Go to your nearest accident and emergency department.
- Dial 999 for an ambulance.
- Describe the symptoms carefully and say that you think it could be meningitis or septicaemia.
- Early diagnosis can be difficult. If you have had advice and are still worried, get medical help again.
- Trust your instincts.

THE SYMPTOMS

Remain vigilant to all the signs.

Early symptoms of meningitis and septicaemia can include:

- fever ■ headache ■ nausea ■ vomiting
- muscle and joint pain.

These can often look like other more common illnesses like flu.

■ Trust your instincts. You know your child, a loved one, or your own body, better than anyone else. If you think it is meningitis, say so.

■ Someone with meningitis or septicaemia can get a lot worse very quickly. Keep checking them.

■ Make sure your family and friends know the signs and symptoms too.

Anticipation rises as film festival is almost here

By Chris Murphy

yourswale@archant.co.uk

FILM lovers are snapping up tickets for the Swale Film Festival, which gets under way later this month.

Now in its fourth year, it will feature a host of locally-made documentaries, features and short films.

Venues due to hold screenings include Avenue Theatre in Sittingbourne, Blue Town Heritage Centre on Sheppey and Creek Creative Centre, Faversham.

Festival director is local film producer Ken Rowles. He said:

"Our mission statement is to introduce the people of Swale to view a selection of old and new films, some made in Kent.

"We want to give the young people of Swale the opportunity to meet filmmakers and gain knowledge of the film and television industries and to give them the opportunity to make their own productions to compete in the Swale Film Awards competition."

The first Swale Film Festival was held in 2008 after then-MP Derek Wyatt put forward his support for the idea at the opening of Sheppey's community cinema.

SCREENING: The Boat that Rocked is one of the more famous films due to be screened during this year's annual Swale Film Festival

Highlights of this year's event, which runs from February 23-26, includes a showing of The History of Sittingbourne and Milton Regis by Colin Harvey. It will be screened at the Avenue Theatre on Thursday, February 23.

Faversham's producer/director Michael Maloney's documentary Red Sails is showing on the Friday, exploring the history of the Thames barges.

Also playing at the Avenue will be the feature film Chalet Girl, starring Tamsin Egerton, Bill Bailey, Brook Shields and Bill Nighy. Strawberry Field, directed by Frances Lea and filmed in Swale, will then be screened on Friday.

And on Sunday at the Heritage Centre, Blue Town, in celebration of the Queen's Jubilee, will be Tribute to Her Majesty, presented by Sir John Mills. This is a film made for a US audience and has never been screened on UK television.

On Friday, in Blue Town, will be British film The Boat that Rocked with Bill Nighy, Rhys Ifans and Kenneth Branagh.

The film is a homage to the pirate radio ships and will be screened with guests who served on the boats during their 60s hey-day.

Sheppey sisters make a splash at lifesaving event

TWIN sisters from Sheerness Swimming Club made a splash at a countywide lifesaving competition.

Gemma and Charlotte Newton, both 11 and from Minster, joined 10 other girls from clubs across Kent in the Royal Lifesaving Society's Junior Individual Skills Championship.

The girls had to demonstrate their lifesaving skills in five tests ranging from resuscitation to surface diving to picking up an object from the bottom of the pool.

After coming first in the resuscitation and non-buoyant aid rescue classes, Gemma went on to finish second – and collected the silver medal, narrowly missing out on top place.

And her sister was close behind. Charlotte took first place in the buoyant aid rescue and eventually finished fourth overall.

Proud club lifesaving coach Phil Crowder said: "The girls did very well this year, and because they are so young they still have three years left before moving up to the next age bracket – that's plenty of time for one or even both of them to win this championship in the future."

Those interesting in joining the Sheerness Swimming Club and Lifeguard Corps can find out more information by calling the membership secretary on 01795 666288 or email sheernessswim@aol.com.

CRIME

Drugs factory raided

A CANNABIS factory has been smashed after police officers raided a house on Sheppey.

Neighbourhood officers in Sheerness executed a drugs warrant on the property in Alexandra Road last Thursday.

Police seized a total of 16 plants which were almost ready for harvesting, along with hydroponic equipment used in their cultivation.

SAGA

Communication not sex key to a long relationship

James Reid

editorial@kosmedia.co.uk

COMMUNICATION is the secret to maintaining a long-lasting relationship according to a major survey by Saga.

The Sandgate-based company which provides services for older people, interviewed more than 10,000 people aged over 50.

One in two people (49 per cent) said talking to each other was the number one way of ensuring relationships are maintained, followed by laughter (14 per cent), never going to bed on an argument, and shared interests (both six per cent).

Despite Valentine's Day being just around the corner, just two per cent claimed that romance was the key to a long-lasting relationship and it is men who find it marginally more important than women, at three per cent to one per cent respectively.

Revealing the extent of our 'sharing' nature, a mere one per cent said that separate finances would enhance the length of a relationship.

Last year a Saga survey found 61 per cent of over 50s said their sex life was more fulfilling today than in their 20s and 30s.

The latest results show that almost half (42 per cent) of sexually active respondents had sex at least once a week, with a further quarter saying fortnightly, a good sex life was not considered to be the main method of maintaining a long relationship – with only four per cent claiming it to be a priority.

This was considered more significant for men at six per cent, compared to only two per cent of women.

Editor at large of Saga Magazine Emma Soames, said: "If you're looking for a long lasting bond, talking to each other is the key.

"This does not mean that romance is dead, on the contrary, making a romantic gesture is one form of communication – the very element that appears to be the secret to ensuring a partnership will stand the true test of time."

SAFETY

Police talk to children about staying safe

THE perils of stranger danger were spelt out to youngsters in Sheerness last week after police paid them a visit.

Two of the force's community support officers, PCSOs, visited West Minster Primary School to give four and five-year-olds a talk on how to keep safe – and to explain the role of the police in the community.

PCSO Terry Hanlon said: "We spent around 40 minutes with the students, answering their questions and letting them try on police uniforms.

"We regularly visit the school but this was the first time we had given an input to the younger students.

"It was a really worthwhile session and something we will definitely look to do again soon."

PCSO Robert Holmes, who joined his colleague on the trip, also holds a weekly meeting at 9am on Tuesdays at the Sheerness Gateway for anyone who would like to discuss any issues or concerns.

CRIME

Streets cleared of illegal cars

By Chris Britcher

chris.britcher@archant.co.uk

A CRACKDOWN on untaxed and abandoned cars has been hailed a success, with offenders being hit with fines or their cars taken away and crushed or re-sold.

Operation Cubit – an operation run by Swale Borough Council in co-operation with Kent Police, the DVLA and Kent County Council – aims to remove unsafe cars from the road and those left abandoned which can become a target for vandals.

In the latest action, 16 vehicles were caught on the road without road tax; seven on Sheppey, five in Faversham and a further four in Sittingbourne. And those who escaped its clutches this time have been warned the action will continue.

Three offenders paid £260 on the spot as a penalty and were told they face further penalties unless they get their vehicles taxed within 14 days. Some 13 cars were seized and taken away to be

SEIZED: The 13 cars that were confiscated by police will be crushed, cubed or re-sold crushed, cubed or re-sold.

During the co-ordinated operation, vehicles can be removed from the road and unless registered owners are able to pay the tax owing and provide valid MOT and insurance the vehicle will be crushed.

Alister Andrews, environmental response manager for Swale Borough Council, said: "By working with our colleagues at Kent Police, DVLA, and Kent County Council we have caught motorists who have failed to tax their vehicles and also managed to rid communities of abandoned cars.

"Operations like these go a long way towards our objectives of creating a cleaner and safer Kent."

Inspector Julie Dodge from Kent Police said: "We have run this operation for a number of years and will continue to do so.

"If your vehicle isn't on the road legally then there is a high chance that it will be seized, and potentially crushed. That possibility should act as motivation to vehicle owners to ensure their vehicle is compliant and helps us make Swale safer for our residents."

INTERIORS

Be inspired to improve your home while celebrating 60 years of great British living

ORGANISERS say a home and garden show being staged at the Glow exhibition centre, Bluewater, will also celebrate the Queen's Diamond Jubilee.

The Great British Home Show 2012 will be held in the new £60 million events venue over the Bank Holiday weekend from May 31 to June 4, and is expected to welcome thousands of visitors.

The theme of the show, 'reveal your hidden home', recognises that people are choosing to stay where they already live and will showcase thousands of inspirational new ideas and products from the best that Britain has to offer.

Alongside hundreds of exhibitors, there will be a Diamond Jubilee street party across one level of the Glow complex, complete with a village green, bandstand, sports village and traditional market stalls all surrounded by gardens designed especially for the show.

The street party will also give visitors the chance to peek inside a typical house from 1952 to see how life in the great British home has changed since the Queen ascended to the throne. The outside loo was still commonplace, post-war rationing on tea finally ended, and just eight homes in every 100 had TVs.

"This is a unique exhibition which will bring a new experience for visitors, with the chance to see and buy all the latest in contemporary design for the home and garden," said Nick James, event director for All About Brands, the company behind the show.

Exhibitors are chosen to ensure visitors can discover the widest possible range of home design from furnishings, kitchens and bathrooms to how to integrate technology into your home.

There will be demonstrations and advice from celebrity experts, including how to choose interior schemes, through to exciting ways to make the most of the space you have, both indoors and out.

"There is no need to move home, this show will focus on making the very best of what you have. We are sure every visitor will leave the event bursting with ideas and inspiration," said Mr James.

HISTORY

Photos reveal dreams of the past as amusement park looks to the future

Picture: MICK TWYMAN COLLECTION

By Ed Hill

ed.hill@archant.co.uk

FANS of amusement parks can now see pictures of Dreamland in its heyday.

The Dreamland Trust has put the pictures dating back to the 1920s on the flickr website.

Suzannah Foad, who looks after the archive, said: "The majority of the collection came from John Hutchinson, who had been collecting them for around 30 years. His family donated them after he died."

The images record the amusement park's history up until the 1980s.

Ms Foad said: "The sheer amount of people in some pictures is unbelievable. In 1920, the year it opened, half a million people went on the scenic railway. It would be fantastic if we could get that again."

At present there are around 350 images, but the trust is keen to hear from anyone who may have pictures of the park down the ages. It will also be recording aural histories from people who worked there.

POPULAR: Crowds flocked to Dreamland in its popular heyday

Ms Foad said: "There is a man who painted posters and a brakeman on the scenic railway, accounts we would not know from the newspapers."

The flickr site is due to be updated every month.

Ms Foad said: "The pictures of the zoo are interesting. There was one incident in the 1950s when 20 monkeys escaped from the zoo. They were found on rooftops, in the churchyard and in a cupboard."

The site is expected to become into an amusement park based on historic rides. Officials are awaiting the outcome of a public inquiry into Thanet District Council's plans to compulsorily purchase the site to turn it into a heritage attraction.

KENT REMEMBERED

Hear blood cries of the French invasion

By Chris Murphy

editorial@kosmedia.co.uk

AN heroic defence of Dover Castle saw off a French invasion after soldiers arrived in their droves from across the Channel in 1216.

In fact, the little-known invasion was so successful, many barons in Kent and the rest of England even acknowledged the new rulers.

This particularly Gaelic slice of Kent history is contained in a fascinating new book by university lecturer Sean McGlynn.

Within the pages he examines just how the French came to run over a third of England, using Kent as their gateway to the rest of the country. The occupation lasted around 18 months, and much blood was spilled during the time.

Mr McGlynn, from Bath, said: "Many barons acknowledged the French leader, Prince Louis the Lion, as the new king of England, as did the king of Scotland, who came all the way down to Dover to pay homage to him.

"This is the first ever book on the subject and comprehensively covers the dramatic and bloody events of the invasion.

"These include the most detailed and complete account ever of the bloody siege of Rochester in 1215, plus the landing on the Isle of Thanet in May, 1216."

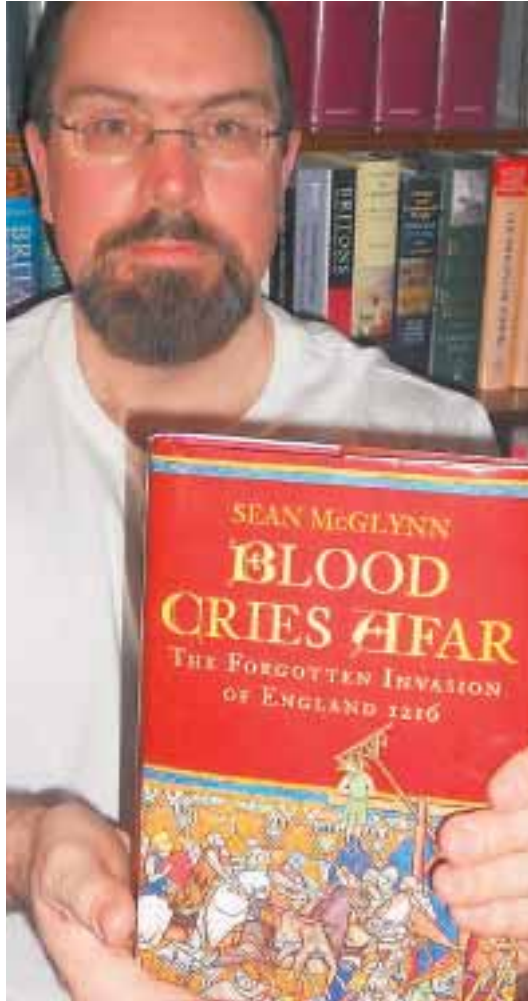

The author said he also covers in detail the siege of Dover Castle; the role of Canterbury and the Cinque Ports played; the fall of Tonbridge Castle; the brutal naval battle of Sandwich in 1217 that ended the invasion, and the burning of the town.

The University of Plymouth lecturer said: "Sitting in a university lecture many, many years ago, the professor made a passing comment on how, near the end of King John's reign in 1216, the French had invaded England, occupied one-third of it, and had their leader hailed as King Louis I.

"And that was it. I was immediately hooked and tried to read more about it. But there was very little to be read.

"After my postgraduate studies I spent a spell in 'the real world' but found I was missing my history too much, so I returned to my first love and began teaching, university lecturing and writing, my first book appearing in 2008.

"After years of research – and still hooked – I have finally written the first book on the topic:

HISTORY MAN: Sean McGlynn's book recounts the French invasion

Blood Cries Afar: The Forgotten Invasion of England 1216.

"The process included visits to Kent, the epicentre of the French invasion, and especially to the always magnificent Dover Castle. The French besieged the castle for the best part of 18 months, but could never take it, thanks to its heroic defence.

"The surprising and dramatic events of the siege are told in great detail in the book.

"Some chroniclers at the time believed it was the failure of the French to take Dover that caused the invasion to fail.

"The final death blow to the invaders was the great, bloody naval defeat off Sandwich, which the French had burned in August, 1217, Britain's medieval Trafalgar moment and far more important than Nelson's victory.

"And let's not forget the epic siege of Rochester Castle in 1215, which triggered the French invasion. I still find the story an exciting one, with epic battles and sieges, and characters such as Louis the Lion, 'Bad' King John, and yes – he really was as bad as they say, William Marshal, known as the best knight in the world.

"There's also my personal favourite, Eustace the Monk, who became a successful pirate with a passion for wind-breaking, cross-dressing and foul-mouthing.

"This was almost a second Norman Conquest, which was 150 years earlier, and its fate was decided in Kent."

Blood Cries Afar: The Forgotten Invasion of England 1216 by Sean McGlynn is out now, priced at £20 for the hardback.

OPINION

Beware the cost of growth

Hilary McGrady of the National Trust explains why the final version of the National Planning Policy Framework must protect beauty

FOR decades England's planning system has protected much-loved places from harmful development – and steered development to those areas where it's needed.

Last July, the Government published its draft National Planning Policy Framework; a 52-page document which could change the face of the English landscape forever by releasing swathes of greenfield land for development.

The National Trust exists to promote the preservation of all special places, not just those places we own or have covenants over. That is why, as soon as we realised the potential impacts of the draft planning policy framework, we launched our Planning for People campaign.

Almost a quarter of a million people have now signed our petition which states: "We believe in growth – but not at all costs.

Planning for people combines long-term growth with other important things like local character and space to breathe, tranquillity and beauty. We need a system that serves all our interests, from commerce to communities."

For the last six months we have been calling on Government to rewrite their framework to safeguard the long-held principle of good, balanced planning. We have submitted a formal response to the consultation asking for a number of changes, including a clearer definition of the term "sustainable development", used throughout the document.

A robust planning system can and should be a tool to deliver long-term, smart growth. Good planning provides a golden opportunity for an urban renaissance, and sensitive, locally-driven evolution of our countryside. As it stands, the draft NPPF will not deliver this.

Being based in the South East I am all too aware of the particular pressure on counties such as Kent to allow inappropriate development. The consequences of the NPPF's permissive approach would be felt more keenly here than anywhere else in the country.

Last year ended on a high note for our Planning for People campaign, as the Communities and Local Government Select Committee published its report on the draft NPPF. This reiterated many of our own concerns with the proposed changes to the planning system. To hear these views echoed by a cross-party group of Conservative, Labour and Lib Dem MPs was very encouraging, and a huge boost to all of our efforts.

The committee's inquiry was originally requested by planning minister and Tunbridge

A robust planning system can be a tool to deliver long-term smart growth

Wells MP Greg Clark, who is now considering the findings before he finalises the NPPF.

We hope Mr Clark will stand by his commitment to take full account of the committee's conclusions. We will keep up the pressure on him and other ministers as they consider the thousands of consultation responses they have received.

We are on daily alert for publication of the final NPPF, which could happen any time before the end of March. Having worked constructively to suggest specific changes to the draft, we are expecting the document to be greatly revised. You can be sure we will pay close attention when it is published. We hope you will too.

Mortgages scheme a welcome development

UNLIKE the generations before them, today's young people wanting to take that first step on the property ladder are faced with a hard – and often impossible – task.

Demands for huge deposits mean hardworking individuals, couples and families are forced instead to rent, forking out dead money on somebody else's mortgage.

But finally through the economic gloom there seems to be a glimmer of hope, thanks to the new council mortgage scheme. And the knock-on effect will likely mean more jobs.

As councils make huge spending cuts in their budgets, it's good to see them investing in something which could help boost the local economy.

Crime figures are wrong

My house was broken into last year in November.

This week I had an old fridge freezer taken from my property, no-one asked if they could have it. It was down by the side of my garages and not easily seen from the roads.

So it meant that the people who took it came on to my property without permission, to remove it.

You would need a truck to take it away. It could be the same people who broke in.

A petty theft but it just shows the people that are about – who will take anything nowadays.

They have no respect for you or for your property.

It is a meaningless incident for our under-staffed, under-funded and over-worked police. It is therefore yet another incident that the authorities will ignore and so keep giving false crime figures.

It is another example that crime will only increase more and more. Joe Public will then start handling these incidents themselves, if they find the perpetrators.

It's more like global freezing

Hundreds of people have died across Europe in the worst freeze for decades. Where's the 'global warming' Ray Duff keeps batting on about, or maybe this would have been even worse without it.

We're told the Thames could freeze over again, as it did in the 1700s, when they were too ignorant of environmental change to become hysterical about it.

Maybe people have made such alterations in their lifestyles, that we now have global cooling. Perhaps we can all worry about that instead of the real elephant in the room, over-population of this planet and the exhaustion of its finite resources by idiots who talk about continual growth.

The winner is still waiting

Re: the question of a raffle for being the one to blow up the towers at Richborough (Letters, January 29).

Your correspondent is correct, a young lad of about 11 years won the prize.

He has probably married now with kids.

Support young entrepreneurs

Following a letter to the Telegraph on January 20 and, subsequently, a thread on Twitter, I am heartened by the proposal made by Richard Branson to the Government.

Supported by a range of entrepreneurs and organisations, Sir Richard is advocating for a Youth Investment Fund. The idea is to offer a loan to enable a young entrepreneur to start up a business rather than study at university.

The fund would run along similar lines to a university loan scheme, the recipient paying back a loan once they are in a position to do so. I suppose the main difference is the young entrepreneur would be contributing to society immediately instead of waiting a minimum of three years.

The Twitter thread #youthinvestmentfund created a fair amount of interest and support is wide ranging.

Kent Foundation for Young Entrepreneurs is the county's only charity that specifically supports young people to start up in business, and we applaud the initiative.

University is not the only answer for young people, employment is hard to find and unemployment is no goal in life. We believe in the fourth option, becoming an entrepreneur and Richard Branson's idea would help the hundreds of potential young entrepreneurs we meet each year.

Paul Barron, Kent Foundation for Young Entrepreneurs

Humiliation is not for drivers

Two weeks ago you carried a picture of gloating Nazis publicly humiliating a person of Jewish origin. In the same edition there was a story about 'speeding' drivers being publicly humiliated by primary school children.

As somebody who has driven for over four decades without injuring anyone, I would not want to be publicly humiliated in this fashion by children who are not even allowed a licence for another 10 years.

As drivers under the 30mph speed limit were not stopped, hence safe (?) what will happen when the limit is reduced to a more trendy 20mph?

Will all drivers above the new 20mph limit, then be subject to the same demonisation and public humiliation?

The dumbed down pinnacle of safe driving is now seen to mean driving under the speed limit (however arrived at), therefore you would not expect any real intelligent policing.

EU is holding back new jobs

The biggest problem facing the European Union at the moment is unemployment.

Eurostat figures indicate 24 million men and women in the 27 European Union member states, of whom 16.5 million were in the euro area, are unemployed.

It surely must be the way forward for economic development of the European Union, for Eurocrats and MEPs to get out of the way of businesses who want to create jobs.

Europe must stop this tendency of passing anti-job creation directives, and allow employers and businesses to grow companies. What the Conservatives in the European Parliament are calling for is the abolition of the Employment and Social Affairs directorate in the European Commission, which has acted as a barrier to job creation.

This directorate must be scrapped and a repatriation of its responsibilities must go to national governments. Then we could scrap the Working Time Directive, the Agency Workers' Directive, the Pregnant Workers' Directive and the other barriers to actually employing people.

We cannot create jobs by talking about them. In fact, we Eurocrats and MEPs can't create jobs at all. What we can do is get out of the way and allow entrepreneurs to invent, make, sell. That's where employment growth comes from. And that's where social security comes from too.

Government hands out millions in bid to revive country's flagging recovery

By Nick Ames

nick.ames@archant.co.uk

SOUTH-EAST England is to receive £33 million from the Government to fund its Local Enterprise Partnership.

And in addition Kent will get more than £2.8m towards the cost of development and infrastructure improvements.

The Government says it is funding communities with ambitions for economic growth across the UK with a cash outlay of almost £1 billion – with Kent getting a generous share of the grants.

Ministers have confirmed the allocation of the £500m Growing Places Fund, designed to boost growth by getting the required infrastructure built to enable the creation of new homes and jobs and get stalled projects moving.

The funding has been allocated to the country's 38 Local Enterprise Partnerships (LEP), which will decide what to prioritise locally.

In total, the South East – which in this context consists of Kent, Essex and East Sussex – will receive £33,226,094.

The South East LEP will consider a short-list of schemes for funding and an announcement on the first tranche of allocations will be made on the successful projects in the next few weeks.

Chairman John Spence said: "This funding will help provide a shot in the arm for the economy of the South East and the whole country."

"It is right that Government supports the businesses and local authorities from across the South East LEP to develop local solutions for local challenges."

"We are clearly geared up to put this funding to work as quickly as possible and will respect the principles of subsidiarity in ensuring that

MONEY UP FOR GRABS:

Almost £1 billion will be given to the UK's 38 LEPs, with the Government hoping it will stimulate economic growth by the creation of new jobs and getting the stalled recovery started again. MP Gordon Henderson would like to see money diverted to the Sheerness area after the job losses at Thamesteel, left our local partners – both private and public sector – use it to drive real growth across the LEP."

The fund can be used to establish revolving funds to take forward a range of projects that can help boost economic growth, as Local Enterprise Partnerships offer funding to developers but also secure a return on that investment.

In addition, Housing Minister Grant Shapps has confirmed a cash boost to 353 councils – including Kent County Council – which will receive £2,838,576 out of a share of the £432m New Homes Bonus funding.

This can be spent on regenerating town centres, reinvigorating treasured local assets or reinvesting in services and enterprise.

Westminster says councils and communities will be able to work together to decide how best to spend their New Homes Bonus.

Andrew Aves, development manager of the Federation of Small Businesses for Kent and Medway, said he was delighted at the news.

"It will offer opportunity for businesses to expand and develop and so create jobs," he said.

"Quite clearly one of the things which was inhibiting economic progress was a lack of available resources, so this is another reason to be positive about this announcement."

"I would like to see money spent on improving Kent's broadband connections, especially in rural areas. This would enable small businesses operating away from town centres to increase their range of activities. Also transport bottlenecks on the roads could be improved and the High Speed 1 rail network extended to Dover and Thanet."

Sittingbourne and Sheppey MP Gordon Henderson said he hoped some of the cash could be made available to increase the economic prospects of the Isle of Sheppey by making it an Enterprise Zone.

"In the wake of the job losses at Thamesteel I consider that very important," he said.

Folkestone and Hythe MP Damian Green said he would like to see more businesses attracted to Folkestone. "We already have a creative hub and it would be good to see media-related companies coming to the town," he told KOS Media.

"We have excellent transport links to London and very reasonably-priced properties."

Mr Shapps said: "The Growing Places Fund will unlock further sites for development, creating new jobs in those areas, while the New Homes Bonus recognises the efforts that have been made over the last year to deliver thousands of new homes and bring empty properties back into use."

"I look forward to seeing how this significant investment will change the shape of communities across the country."

Transport Secretary Justine Greening said: "Transport provides the crucial links that allow people and businesses to prosper."

"This investment will develop and improve the infrastructure that moves goods and people around, helping to build the balanced, dynamic and sustainable economy that is needed for our future prosperity."

"The fund is also a unique opportunity for Local Enterprise Partnerships to establish a rolling investment programme and leverage the private sector to continue to deliver future projects that maximise economic benefit."

"Our vision is for a transport system that is not only an engine for economic growth but also one that is safer, more environmentally friendly and improves quality of life in our communities."

The South East Local Enterprise Partnership is a partnership involving leaders from business, local government and further and higher education. It covers Kent, Medway, East Sussex and parts of Essex, including Southend and Thurrock

Dame Kelly up and running for hospice dinner

DOUBLE-Olympic gold winner Dame Kelly Holmes is limbering up for the Torchlight Dinner – Hospice In The Weald's 2012 black-tie corporate dinner – where she is the guest speaker.

Dame Kelly will share her experiences of what makes a winner and how sport can provide people with inspiration at the Haver Castle event on Friday, February 24.

The Olympian has been a supporter of Hospice In The Weald for many years.

The charity became close to her heart when her coach Dave Arnold died at the hospice two years to the day that she won the 1,500m gold medal in Athens.

She said: "I always believe in helping others, and what Hospice In The Weald does to help patients and their families get through what could be the worst time in their life is unbelievable," said Dame Kelly.

The Tunbridge Wells branch of Handelsbanken and the award-winning accountancy firm Creaseys, also based in Tunbridge Wells, are headline sponsors for the event, while Brolley is sponsoring the champagne reception.

Guests will be able to bid on auction prizes, including a VIP day out at the RHS

Chelsea Flower Show, lunch for six at Coutts in London, fishing at Castle Forbes in Scotland, dinner for six cooked by Hari Covert in your own home and tank-driving and afternoon tea at Newick Park.

There will also be a silent auction, with donations from Chilstone and Knowle Grange Health Spa among others.

A highlight of the evening is a raffle with a grand prize of an overnight stay for two in the penthouse of the Corinthia Hotel in London, including dinner for two in The Northall, breakfast and two one-hour spa treatments.

CALL TO ARMS: Dame Kelly

Hospice benefits after generous deal brokered

A CHARITY that supports terminally-ill patients and their families has tied up with an insurance broker to benefit from an innovative fund-raising opportunity.

Supporting more than 350 patients at any time and with running costs of more than £3.6 million a year, The Heart of Kent Hospice in Aylesford is heavily dependent on the generosity of its community to be able to continue to provide its expert care and support for patients with advanced cancer, motor neurone disease or other life-limiting illnesses.

In the current economic climate, when more traditional fund-raising streams don't always generate the necessary funding, the charity was seeking alternative ways of raising valuable funds.

Broker Chris Knott Insurance was able to provide just that by offering it a unique fund-raising alternative.

Whenever a hospice supporter asks Chris Knott for a car, home or business insurance quote, the broker will donate a quarter of its earnings on the resulting policy to the hospice.

It will then do the same at renewal during the life of the policy.

Caroline Brinkman, corporate fund-raiser at the hospice, said: "Our supporters are already buying their insurance from somewhere, but we're asking them to try The Heart of Kent Hospice scheme.

"If the cover and the cost are comparable, why wouldn't they switch and benefit their local hospice? I would encourage individual supporters and our corporate partners to call for a quote at renewal time."

Neil Franklin, MD of Chris Knott Insurance, said: "We love helping local charities to raise funds in this way and I'm personally delighted to be working with The Heart of Kent Hospice.

"Hospices do such vital work in our communities and it's our pleasure to give fund-raising assistance to one of the region's best-respected providers of palliative care."

'Confidence sparking a surge in buy-out action'

By Nick Ames

nick.ames@archant.co.uk

THERE has been an increase in acquisitions in the manufacturing sector, according to a corporate-finance team.

The team in Crowe Clark Whitehill's Tunbridge Wells office says an increase in confidence for an export-led economic recovery has prompted the activity.

As well as seeing a rise in enquiries from prospective vendors and purchasers, the team has just completed advising on the purchase of Milton Keynes manufacturer Europtica International Limited by Surrey-based Bridgwater Bros Holdings Limited (BBH).

Europtica produces re-circulation, filtration and chilling machines used in lens production laboratories all over the world, notably supplying key customers in the US and Japan for many years.

The company's export success has just seen it deliver its first orders to Korea and Australia.

With the founder owner wishing to retire, BBH made an offer that provided the resources to support further growth while allowing for such a withdrawal.

The acquisition of Europtica, which reported a net profit margin of 31 per cent in its most recent accounts, will allow BBH to expand its existing portfolio of niche companies and take annual group sales through the £10 million barrier.

BUILDING SUCCESS: Geert Struyven says that the deal was an excellent opportunity

Crowe Clark Whitehill advised on all aspects of the deal, leading BBH through the investment process and also advising on specific areas of negotiation.

George Reynolds, BBH managing director, said: "In recent years, Europtica has expanded its offering to a number of new overseas markets and it is probable that other UK businesses will have to follow this example, with future growth needing to be driven by increased exports, notably outside the EU.

"Crowe Clark Whitehill's specialist experience and due diligence was invaluable in helping us identify and address key deal issues, enabling us to complete the transaction within a tight timeframe while maintaining an amicable relationship with the vendor."

Geert Struyven, corporate finance partner at Crowe Clark Whitehill, said: "In the case of Europtica, the acquisition provided an excellent opportunity for BBH to build upon the success already achieved by this well-managed company and develop it further into overseas markets.

"This is also reflective of an increased level of activity and interest in the manufacturing sector, with potential investors particularly interested in companies who have a uniquely-engineered or designed product."

Jobs boost as car firm opens new showroom

VAUXHALL retailer St Leonards Motors (SLM) is tackling the tough economic times head on by opening a new site in Tunbridge Wells.

SLM has been established in the South East for more than 50 years, with its Vauxhall site in Hastings offering a range of new and used cars, commercial vehicles and even a dedicated bodyshop. The retailer is now expanding the business across new horizons, with a new site set to open in Kent next month.

SLM managing director Ian Wakeford said: "Here at St Leonards Motors, we have been keen to find an opportunity to expand and grow our Vauxhall franchise. With the magnificent site soon to open on Dowding Way in Tunbridge Wells, we can certainly deliver on all accounts.

"The building is undergoing a complete refurbishment before it opens in February and will offer new- and used-car sales, vehicle servicing and a fully-stocked parts department, all under one roof."

The showroom opens up a number of new job opportunities in the area and both customers and staff alike can feel in safe hands as heading the new team will be Jonathan Tatlock, who arrives fresh from the SLM site in St Leonards-on-Sea, where he has served as sales manager for some three years.

Tatlock said: "We put looking after our customers above anything else, and every site within the family-run business lives, eats and breathes the same philosophy, which is why I joined the firm."

The SLM name brings with it an award-winning customer-service record, having been named in Vauxhall's first-ever Customer Excellence Awards this year.

The retailer is one of the top 40 dealerships in the UK to have achieved outstanding results in Vauxhall's customer surveys, which monitored both sales and servicing.

For more information on the new Vauxhall site, which is soon to open on the North Farm Estate at Dowding Way, phone 01424 755855 or visit www.slmvauxhall.co.uk.

Bank builds charitable relationships

CHARITIES are to gain extra help in the form of a new relationship director.

Barclays Corporate has strengthened its charity offering with the introduction of the post responsible for providing specialist support across the country and further afield.

Jon Emery, who already has responsibility for Barclays Corporate's relationships with local authorities and the education sector in Kent, will join a nationwide team of 40 specialists providing increased local-level support to the voluntary sector.

The move is a direct response to the headwinds facing third-sector organisations, which include falling Government grants and pressure on donations.

Charities are now able to draw on a network of relationship directors across the UK. They not only have an in-depth knowledge of the voluntary sector but also understand the individual needs and issues facing the charities.

David McHattie, head of charities at Barclays Corporate, said: "With funding cuts bearing down and donations falling, charities face the challenge of reducing incomes just at a time when they are most needed.

"We believe it is essential that Barclays Corporate is able to provide increased support and advice at a local level."

One issue Barclays Corporate will help charities tackle is how to maximise efficiencies, whether it be removing duplications in managing finances, consolidating cash balances or negotiating better deals based on economies of scale.

Emery said: "We will work with charities to explore how best to navigate the current environment and will also evaluate whether now might be the time for them to take on a modest debt to maximise incomes from their efforts.

"Scope, the disability charity, raised £20m to support fund-raising at the end of last year and other charities are exploring whether this is the right time to generate new streams of income."

Networkers throw black-tie dinner in support of vulnerable children

MORE than £3,500 has been raised for charity by The Wealden Business Group.

A black-tie dinner was held in aid of The Caldecott Foundation, the Smeth-based charity that cares for young people who have suffered cruelty and neglect.

The dinner, held at Tenterden's Little Silver Country Hotel, was attended by 120 members and guests of WBG, the business-networking organisation that meets weekly and has an active social calendar, including charity fund-raising events.

Guests, who took part in an auction, raffle and fun casino to raise funds, were welcomed by WBG chairman Chris Sturdy.

Group member Richard Harvey, who is also chairman of Caldecott's centenary fund-raising committee, told guests that the charity was raising £750,000 to build a vocational training centre and other facilities for older teenagers to help them into the workplace and supported adult living.

EARLSCLIFFE

Accent on traditional subjects and teaching rather than self-study

EARLSCLIFFE is a new, independent A-level college in Folkestone which is enrolling now for September entry.

The college is offering traditional subjects in its renovated Victorian premises on Shorncliffe Road to both boarding and day students looking for a unique, personalised post-16 education preparing them for entry to top UK universities.

Tim Fish, director, has 22 years' experience in this sector and will be giving introductory presentations from 10am to midday at Earlscliffe's first open morning, on Saturday, February 18, at The Burlington Hotel, Earls Avenue, Folkestone.

Mr Fish said: "It's undeniable that Russell Group universities prefer the so-called traditional subjects such as mathematics, the sciences and economics etc over what they see as softer subjects such as media and even business. We're focusing therefore on the former."

But what makes Earlscliffe different from similar institutions?

Mr Fish said: "We are a small college of no more than 80 students and we have a maximum class size of nine. We deliver nine lessons per week in each main subject, preferring to give more teaching time rather than self-study periods."

"Our weekly TRaC testing each Friday afternoon gives immediate feedback to both students and parents on progress and performance and is a useful diagnostic tool, so we can allocate extra help if needed."

Earlscliffe is more than lessons, tests and teachers – it offers competitive sports teams, regular sports sessions, cultural activities, study trips and opportunities for community service.

As part of its Extend and Enrich programme, students will take part in the English Speaking Union's annual debating competition, the University of Cambridge Science Festival, the Senior UK Mathematics Challenge competition.

All students can attend the fortnightly formal dinner, when an invited guest will tell Earlscliffe students of his or her experiences in a career as a politician, medic, artist, philanthropist, musician or business leader, for example.

Aside from experience in both International Baccalaureate and A-level institutions, latterly as a head-teacher for 12 years, Mr Fish, along with his Belgian wife Julie, has operated Sussex Summer Schools as a successful provider of residential courses for juniors since 2001, and therefore opening Earlscliffe is a natural progression for them.

"We're excited about opening Earlscliffe in Folkestone and we're passionate about providing high-quality education both in and out of the classroom," said Mr Fish.

You can speak to Tim and Julie in person on Saturday, February 18, at the Earlscliffe open morning to learn more about their approach to A-level study.

For more information about the college, you can visit www.earlscliffe.co.uk.

ROCHESTER INDEPENDENT COLLEGE

University-style approach offers college pupils ideal preparation

SIXTH form is an exciting watershed in your education, and for many it is important to have a change in environment to help prepare for higher education.

While Rochester Independent College welcomes children from the age of 11 into year seven, it is the only independent school in Kent that started as a sixth-form college specialising in exam-focused A-level study.

It offers a refreshingly different university-style approach in these educational make-or-break years, and 40 A-level subjects are taught to more than 180 sixth-formers in class sizes averaging eight pupils.

Both day and boarding places are available.

Any combination of A-levels is possible, so pupils are always studying exactly the subjects they want. An engaging team of subject specialists creates an enthusing and supportive atmosphere. Students can join for two-year A-level courses, intensive one-year A-levels after completing year 12 elsewhere, or short retake programmes.

Peter Read, from Kent Independent Educational Advice, said: "I was so impressed with the classes and teaching I saw and came away with a very positive view of the college, its ethos and aspirations."

"The priority of teaching and learning was foremost and the students projected such a positive attitude toward their studies."

Judith Wickham, an RIC parent from

ROCHESTER
INDEPENDENT COLLEGE

Maidstone, wrote: "This is just to say a very big 'thank you' to all of my son's tutors for your superb guidance, expert management of the application for law, unfailing kindness, patience and brilliant teaching."

"You taught him to think properly, to write clearly and fulfilled every promise you made to us."

While non-selective, RIC students excel at the traditional academic subjects and Ofsted judges the quality of education to be 'outstanding'.

Small teaching groups, regular testing and structured tutorial support are all contributory factors to this success.

College alumni have been welcomed everywhere from Central St Martins to the Royal Veterinary College.

A record three students are holding offers this year from Cambridge College, Trinity.

Whatever pupils want to do when they leave RIC, they'll be superbly well prepared for university entrance either in the UK or overseas.

KING'S ROCHESTER

Long-standing head steps down... but leaves school in finest of form

AFTER 26 years at the helm of King's Rochester, headmaster Dr Ian Walker will be retiring in July.

Under his leadership, King's became co-educational in 1992, and this greatly changed the nature of the school.

Dr Walker said: "Maturation of King's came about with the advent of girls and I am really pleased about that and glad that I did it."

He also founded King's Pre-Preparatory School, allowing pupils to join King's from the age of three, continuing their education, unbroken, all the way up to 18.

The pre-prep and nursery are now housed in Chadlington House, built with the assistance of a generous donation from King's old boy Lord Chadlington of Dean.

Over the years, Dr Walker has initiated many building projects and improvements to the school's facilities, and in particular the boarding houses have benefited.

King's has a flexible approach to boarding (parents can opt in and out) and the rooms are especially popular for day-pupils to move in for concentrated study during public exams.

Other additions include the Bob Doubles café, which is open to pupils and staff as well as to parents, providing them with the perfect meeting place before the weekly cathedral services to which they are always invited.

Dr Walker also campaigned to raise an impressive £350,000 for a 25-metre indoor heated pool; this is used extensively for swimming lessons, galas and kayaking training.

Foreign-language provision is a key part of King's education, with pupils as young as three learning German as part of their everyday lessons. All languages taught may be studied up to A-level and it was thanks to Dr Walker that the school was awarded two substantial grants from the Wolfson Foundation to build language laboratories enabling the teaching of a broad range of languages, including German, French, Russian and Latin.

However, while Dr Walker has made many improvements to the facilities at the school during his headship, he said: "Buildings are just the shell of a school. The people in it are its soul."

"King's pupils are invariably lovely, good company – thoroughly decent people, culturally, ethically, spiritually and morally – and this is the real joy of the job for me."

"King's always was, and continues to be, a wonderful school. I will miss the pupils and the enjoyment of the company of my colleagues, but I leave it in good shape and I can't imagine handing it over to a better man."

Mr Jeremy Walker will take up the post of Principal at King's Rochester in September and will be at the school's open morning on Saturday, March 3, from 9.30am to noon.

The school has also been performing excellently academically. King's A-level pupils who collected their results last summer achieved an average point score per examination entry of 238.5, outstripping all local grammar schools and the national average of 216.2.

The students who achieved these wonderful grades last summer are now studying at top universities across the UK, including five at Oxford and Cambridge and others at outstanding Russell Group establishments such as Durham, Bristol, Liverpool, Imperial College London and Leeds.

GCSE candidates did the school proud, too.

Their achievements put them above all the Kent broad-ability, independent schools, with 92 per cent of pupils gaining 'five good GCSEs' or more.

Dr Walker said: "I am delighted that King's pupils have achieved another crop of outstanding results at GCSE and A-level – and especially in my last year as headmaster."

"I am, however, not surprised that King's has ranked so highly in the latest league tables."

"Such results are the culmination of solid hard work by our broad-ability pupils and their teachers. They are the proof that we serve our youngsters and their futures far better by offering them traditional subjects taught by supportive, inspirational staff."

"Dumbing down a curriculum with a plethora of 'Mickey Mouse' vocational subjects serves no one, and the top academic results achieved year on year by King's pupils prove that."

To hear more about the outstanding examination results at King's Rochester, you can visit the school's open morning on Saturday, March 3, from 9.30am until midday.

LEADER: King's Rochester will bid a sad farewell to headmaster Dr Ian Walker after 26 years

Training, courses and careers

Women helped back on track

MANY young women in Kent are missing out on a career in engineering because traditional university routes are closed to them because of subject choices they made pre-GCSE, according to Network Rail.

The company says one of its apprenticeships can reopen academic doors, with the company funding around 40 apprentices a year to further their education with a part-time HNC in engineering.

The best are then supported to do foundation degrees, undergraduate degrees and reach chartered engineering status.

Now Network Rail is urging young women who are interested in a career in engineering to apply for its advanced apprenticeship scheme for 2012 – with 200 places up for grabs.

Applicants can visit a new Facebook page www.facebook.com/onttrack with videos, profiles and content managed by current apprentices who can respond directly to any enquiries and showcase the opportunities on offer.

Figures from the Higher Education Statistics Agency show women get better grades at university than men with 66 per cent achieving a first or 2:1 compared to 60 per cent of men.

However only 15 per cent of people taking engineering or technology undergraduate degrees are women.

Army teams up with city college

MILITARY personnel and their families are to get more help with courses and qualifications thanks to Canterbury College signing an Armed Forces Community Covenant with commanding officers of Army regiments based in the city.

It means the college will offer help and guidance to Canterbury's 650-plus military personnel and their families about its hundreds of courses that will leave them with a civilian qualification.

The Army will work closely with the college on joint projects, the sharing of skills and expertise and the mutual support of college staff and students.

Canterbury College principal Alison Clarke said: "It is a great honour and privilege to sign the covenant. I feel it's an historic moment."

"We pride ourselves on being a college at the cutting edge of new developments, and we're especially delighted to be part of this one."

"We really value the contribution that local Armed Forces have made to our community and thank them for the valuable work they do. This is a fantastic opportunity for all of us to work closely together to the benefit of the community as a whole."

Funds to support 35 new apprenticeships

UP to 35 new apprentice jobs in Swale could be supported with grants from the borough council.

The news coincides with last week's annual National Apprenticeship Week, run by the National Apprenticeship Service.

The event is designed to raise the profile of apprenticeships and to engage and persuade employers of the advantages of employing and supporting apprentices in their workplace.

It also highlights the talent and skills of apprentices and also the wide variety of apprenticeships that are available.

Swale Borough Council recently challenged local employers to recruit apprentices through the 100 in 100 scheme, which saw pledge 96 apprenticeship opportunities, with 55 starts in 40 businesses in 2011.

70 businesses

And now, following the announcement of forthcoming government employer incentives, the council has updated the eligibility criteria for its apprenticeship grant programme.

The grant is designed to enable small or medium-sized employers to look at apprenticeships and consider employing the growing number of young people struggling to get their careers off to a start.

The grant fund, which was created by Swale Borough Council in partnership with the local 14-19 Planning Forum and Kent County Council, is part of wider efforts in the borough to grow the number of apprenticeships that are available.

As a pilot scheme funding is limited, but the new grant hopes to support up to 35 apprenticeships. The grant of £1,500 per apprentice is discretionary and to be eligible the supported apprenticeship must meet certain criteria.

The employer must be based in Swale, from either the private or voluntary sector and must employ no more than 50 staff.

It must be either offering apprenticeships for the first time or returning to the recruitment of an apprentice after a lapse of 12 months or more.

The apprentice must be resident in Swale and be on the NEET register (they are not in education, employment or training). Candidates must have started the apprenticeship before March 31, 2012.

Cllr John Wright, cabinet member for regeneration and learning and skills at Swale council said: "We are delighted to be in a position to expand the number of employers and young people eligible to benefit from this grant scheme, as well as being able to increase the grant available."

"Recent unemployment statistics have highlighted that 16 to 24-year-olds are finding it increasingly difficult to access jobs. We are determined to make a difference and encourage local employers to consider taking on apprentices."

Interested employers can contact the economic development team at Swale Borough Council on 01795 417398 or email edu@swale.gov.uk.

TRAINING: Unemployed youngsters in Swale could benefit from the council's funding

INCLUSION MANAGER

This is a unique and challenging opportunity to help shape the future of this school.

When you check our Ofsted report you will see why; but you will also see the positive direction the school has already taken. We would not expect you to face this challenge without support so as a senior leader you would work with colleagues within the leadership team to build on the systems already in place to ensure the progress and attainment of all children accelerates through high quality teaching and learning. There will be a teaching commitment and ample management time to carry out this role.

Candidates will be expected to evidence:

- An excellent role model as a teacher
- An articulate vision for improving the achievement of all children and experience of supporting vulnerable groups of children in particular
- Experience of using data analysis to improve outcomes in teaching and learning
- Experience of leading and managing the performance of colleagues within a primary school
- Experience of multi-agency working to actively meet the needs of children
- A commitment to inspiring children and adults with a positive, forward - looking attitude
- A commitment to working with parents/carers

We are seeking to appoint an enthusiastic team player to join our supportive and hardworking staff. The Inclusion Manager will enjoy working within a positive and calm ethos, working alongside teachers and be responsible for managing a team of support staff, all of whom are committed to inspiring children to achieve their best.

The post offers the opportunity for career development and TLR payments at 2A. The successful candidate is required to have a proven record as an excellent class teacher.

Dover Road Community Primary is a large school situated in Northfleet, serving the needs of 500+ children. The school is currently housed in two buildings with a variety of annexes. A light, bright and spacious feel throughout the school supports the warm ethos which celebrates children's achievements and values all members of this exciting community school.

Visits to the school are expected; a full job description is available upon request.

PUBLIC RIGHTS OF WAY & VILLAGE GREENS

VILLAGE GREENS - DISTRICT OF SHEPWAY

KENT COUNTY COUNCIL

COMMONS ACT 2006 - SECTION 15(1)

NOTICE OF APPLICATION FOR THE REGISTRATION OF LAND AS A VILLAGE GREEN

Application has been made to the Registration Authority, Kent County Council, by Mr. D. Cowell under section 15(1) of the Commons Act 2006 and in accordance with the Commons Registration (England) Regulations 2008. The application seeks the inclusion in the Register of Town and Village Greens of the land described in the Schedule below which is claimed to have qualified for registration as a Town or Village Green by virtue of the use of the land for the purposes of lawful sports and pastimes 'as of right' and without challenge by the landowner for a period of over 20 years.

If the Registration Authority is satisfied that the land described below qualifies for registration as a Town or Village Green, it will so register the land.

The application, which includes a plan of the land proposed for registration, may be inspected at the offices of Kent County Council at the address below. Please contact the Commons Registration Team on 01622 221628 to make an appointment prior to visiting to ensure that a member of the team is available to assist you.

Any person wishing to make representations regarding the application should send a written statement of the facts upon which the representation is based to Miss. Melanie McNeir at Kent County Council, either by post at the address below or by email to commons.villagegreens@kent.gov.uk, so as to arrive no later than Monday 26th March 2012. Please quote reference VGA636. Representations must include the name and postal address of the person making them and the nature of their interest (if any) in the land affected by the application. They must also be signed by the person making them and state the grounds on which they are made.

Please note that any representations that are to be taken into account by the Registration Authority in reaching a decision on the application cannot be treated as confidential and may come into the public domain during the processing of the application. Copies of any objections or representations received will be forwarded to the applicant for comment and may be disclosed to other interested parties, including the Planning Inspectorate where the case is referred to it for determination.

Description of the land claimed to have qualified for registration as a Village Green

An area of land of approximately 14 acres (5.6 hectares) in size consisting of woodland, known locally as the Sandgate escarpment, situated adjacent to Shorncliffe Camp (Sir John Moore Barracks), at Sandgate, near Hythe. The application excludes Martello towers 6 and 7.

TONTINE STREET, FOLKESTONE (PROHIBITION OF DRIVING) TEMPORARY ORDER 2012

THE ROAD TRAFFIC REGULATION ACT 1984
AS AMENDED BY THE ROAD TRAFFIC
(TEMPORARY RESTRICTIONS) ACT 1991

To enable the safe placement of a mobile crane to install a tower crane, Kent County Council has made an Order prohibiting through traffic on Tontine Street, Folkestone, on or after Sunday 19 February 2012 for up to 1 day or until the works have been completed.

Tontine Street will be closed between the junctions with The Old High Street and Dover Road / Grace Hill.

The alternative route is via A260 The Tram Road (with suspension of one-way), Southern Way, Dover Road, Hill Road, Canterbury Road, Black Bull Road, A2033 Foord Road North, New Street, Bradstone Road and Dover Road.

The One-way Traffic Order in respect of Tontine Street will be suspended from the junction with The Old High Street to the point of closure and from the point of closure extending along the western spur of Tontine Street to the junction with Grace Hill, for access only.

The One-way Traffic Order in respect of The Tram Road will be suspended from Harbour Street to the junction with Morrison Road (where it becomes 2-way).

The Orders preventing traffic turning left from Martello Road, Ryland Place, London Street and Elmstead Place will be suspended.

Waiting will be prohibited in Tontine Street on the north east side, from a point in line with the boundary wall of numbers 32 - 34 and 26 - 30 south eastwards to a point in line with the boundary walls of numbers 24 and 20 - 22.

Waiting will be prohibited in The Tram Road on the north west side, from the centre line of the junction with Elmstead Place south westwards for a distance of approximately 32 metres.

Both waiting restrictions take effect from 6.00 pm on Saturday 18 February until 8.00 pm the following day, and will apply for the corresponding times if these works are postponed.

If weather prevents these works going ahead on the planned date, they will be deferred until one of the following 2 Sundays.

(RESTRICTIONS AND PROHIBITIONS OF WAITING,

CONSOLIDATION ORDER 2010 (AMENDMENT NO 13)
ROAD TRAFFIC REGULATION ACT 1984

NOTICE is hereby given that the Kent County Council, in exercise of its powers under Sections 1, 2 and 124, of the Road Traffic Regulation Act 1984, proposes to extend the existing "At Any Time" Waiting Restrictions in Sir John Moore Avenue, Hythe within the District of Shepway.

The purpose of the proposal is to enable a safe two way flow of traffic to be maintained in a location that currently has uncontrolled parking. Currently drivers park their vehicles too close to the junction of Sir John Moore Avenue with Military Road (A259) and the result of this is a significant reduction in the flow of traffic to a single lane.

Sir John Moore Avenue is also subject to significant HGV movements and it is felt that in the interests of road and pedestrian safety the existing "At Any Time" waiting restrictions should be extended on the east side by approximately 36 metres to prevent obstruction to ease congestion and introduce two lane traffic flows.

A copy of the proposed Order, an explanatory statement and a map showing the extents of the scheme may be inspected during normal office hours at The Kent County Council Offices, Sessions House, County Road, Maidstone, Kent, ME14 1XX, Hythe Town Council Offices, Oaklands, Stade Street, Hythe, Kent, CT21 6BG and at Shepway District Council Offices, Civic Centre, Castle Hill Avenue, Folkestone, Kent, CT20 2QY.

Anyone wishing to support, or object to the "At Any Time" Waiting Restrictions proposal should write to Mrs Diane Bourne, Jacobs Engineering UK Ltd, Miller House, Lower Stone Street, Maidstone, Kent, ME15 6GB quoting the name of the Order and Reference No "B1764600" and stating their reasons, by not later than Monday 7 2011.

THE INTERVIEW

Martin Latham

Teapots that go bang in the night

Ghosts, pirates and explosive crockery all feature in a book on the very strange, discovers Nick Ames.

THE bizarre side of the rich tapestry of Kent's history and folklore is the subject of a new book by a writer who manages a haunted shop with exploding teapots.

Kent's Strangest Tales is the title of the work by Martin Latham, who runs the Waterstones bookstore in St Margaret's Street, Canterbury.

From Chaucer's legendary tales of naughtiness to the meeting of Mick Jagger and Keith Richards at Dartford train station that led to the formation of The Rolling Stones, the book features an astonishing range of tales. Ghosts, castles, treasures, pirates, Britain's oldest highway and the old ladies who tricked a Luftwaffe pilot by plying him with tea... they're all in here.

One of the ghost stories focuses on the strange happenings in Latham's own shop.

"The coffee shop in the store used to sell loose tea for pots – as opposed to just teabags," he said. "Among its regular customers was an old lady who hated teabags and wouldn't use them. She insisted on the loose tea. Well, one day she stopped coming and the opinion was that she had passed away.

"Soon after, strange things started happening to our teapots. They would practically explode for no apparent reason, spilling the contents on to the floor. It would only happen to those with loose tea – you can still see the stains.

"Finally the shop switched to teabags and it seemed to stop. But on another occasion I watched as a big pile of plates fell off a counter one by one and smashed."

Latham is responsible for another remarkable facet of the store.

"I had heard rumours from the shop's previous staff that there were Roman remains under the floorboards, so I asked Canterbury Archaeological Trust if they would be interested in investigating.

"We managed to find the original Roman remains – complete with the underfloor heating system. Now it is all on show in our basement, which stocks history books.

"There is an earlier wall and the tiles of the hypocaust, as the Romans called their heating system. Behind the remains there is a large picture of what Canterbury would have looked like under the Roman Empire, with the city dominated by a massive amphitheatre which, it is thought, was used to stage both dramatic productions and gladiatorial contests.

"Waterstones didn't know about it – in fact the first time they became really aware was when they tried to process the slip for £1,000 to cover the work which I had submitted. Now they are fine with it – as it has put the shop on the tourist trail."

Another Canterbury story

featured in the book tells of a little-known part of the cathedral.

"There's a chapel in the grounds which holds a service in French once a month," said Mr Latham. "They were originally for the city's Huguenot population.

"But my personal favourite is the story of the phantom hitchhiker of Blue Bell Hill, who vanishes."

Latham wrote his book because everyone loves a good mystery.

"Whether someone is a road-sweeper or a university professor, they can debate issues from popular culture and history," he said.

"For instance, did King Henry VIII insist that Deal Castle was built in the shape of a Tudor rose?"

However, Latham was not able to get information on all the unusual tales he set out to recount.

"There was something I heard about Bluewater," he said. "It's about the site being more than just a quarry. I heard rumours there was something unusual about why it existed at all, something about explosions and the military.

"Another of the stories I couldn't track down was the origin of the shingle spit – known as The Street – offshore from Whitstable. It doesn't seem to obey any of the usual rules that govern longshore drift."

■ Kent's Strangest Tales is published by Anova Books and available from Waterstones and online.

FOOD & DRINK

Oxford graduates with honours in hard times

IN THIS era of austerity, going out for a meal is not a decision to be taken lightly. After all, £60-plus can go a long way and it can be hard to justify the spending just to give your taste buds a night on the tiles.

All of which provides an extra challenge to the newcomer. If you don't have a famous chef or a big brand name behind you, how do you convince the anxious, budget-conscious diner to choose you?

Whitstable is no stranger to new restaurants. Over the past 10 years it has been transformed and now offers a positive smorgasbord of options.

So trying to muscle in on the scene is no easy task. Especially when you plonk your feet into the shoes of perhaps one of the town's foremost eateries – Salt Marsh.

Before its recent move to form part of The Duke of Cumberland pub right at the heart of the town, Salt Marsh occupied modest premises midway down Whitstable's main Oxford Street thoroughfare.

From there it developed an enviable reputation, with cosy dining, no menus and not even a price-list to distract the hungry visitor. You rather bought into the experience. And since its move to bigger premises, that special atmosphere has been diluted.

Which means there was considerable interest when The Oxford set up shop in its old premises.

The interior is a little cleaner, a little sharper, than its predecessor. The tables are still big wooden affairs with a hotch-potch of chairs, but there is not quite the controlled chaos of Salt Marsh and there's no uncertainty, either. Prices are clear, menus in abundance.

The air of mystery may have left it, but The Oxford has managed to turn a small restaurant into a different beast, albeit sharing the same wardrobe.

But the warm atmosphere and encouraging hubbub of voices that greets you on a cold Saturday night will stand for little if the food is a let-down.

Fortunately, the food is anything but. It promises to be that rarest of beasts – a modern British restaurant, and one that doesn't feel the obligation to serve up fancy fish and chips just to satisfy the seaside setting.

Juicy, tender scallops on a citrus salad with a pomegranate dressing (£6.90) was a divine way to kick off a meal, the test of making a scallop melt in the mouth and bring a taste of the sea, rather than like a piece of rubber, well navigated.

RESTAURANT REVIEW

A pear and dulce latte tower with port and walnuts (£5.50), meanwhile, was both unusual and tasty.

Fillet steak with dauphinoise potatoes was equally as compelling (£18.50). The hunk of meat was cooked beautifully and full of flavour, offset with a delicious beetroot cream.

The pan-fried lemon sole (£15) packed a citrus punch – perilously close to overpowering but managing to flavour the fish with a lemon zing rather than dominate.

All was served up by friendly and efficient staff and rounded off with a chocolate brownie.

The total bill, including a bottle of wine, came to a smudge over £68, which was not only good value in these difficult times but also gave a sense of The Oxford trying very hard to impress, as you would expect any fresh business to do.

All the dishes were presented with a flourish – there was an artistic flair – while the size of the portions managed to avoid being either too small and pretentious or too large and intimidating.

If it keeps up this level of effort and can lure diners away from the many restaurants closer to the seafront, The Oxford should flourish. It certainly deserves to.

Hot or not... a new look is coming

A MEXICAN restaurant in Thanet is being refurbished to "create an exciting new dining experience".

UK chain Chiquito has announced its bar and restaurant at Westwood Cross retail park will close for nine days from Monday, February 20, for a makeover.

The restaurant offers inviting décor, with bold, bright colours and an eclectic mix of furniture to adhere to the Mexican theme.

■ Chiquito, Westwood Cross retail park, Thanet CT12 5GR
Telephone: 01843 579320
Web: www.chiquito.co.uk

The Chiquito group has more than 100,000 diners across the UK each week, choosing traditional dishes such as quesadillas, wraps and nachos, as well as the more familiar burgers, chicken and salads.

The 'hot or not' barometer offers guests a choice of spice level, and cocktails are served in the bar.

The Chiquito team at Thanet said: "The new-look eatery will give you a little pick-me-up on those chilly winter days."

Superb variety that brooks no argument

WHEN it comes to providing choice of food styles, Kent plays second fiddle to no one.

Our fair county is not named the Garden of England for no reason! Some of the finest locally-grown produce available in the UK can be found in this far south-eastern corner of the country. Our livestock, whether reared on the rich grasses of the North Downs or the far-reaching plains of Romney Marsh, is the envy of farmers across Europe.

Chicken, goose, pheasant, woodpigeon and duck are just some of the delicacies available at our extraordinary eateries across the county.

Kent's lengthy coastline supplies our many seaside restaurants with more shellfish and varied catches than you can shake a rod at. And our fruit farms offering apples, pears, cherries, strawberries and plums are just the icing on the cake for those tasty, sweet desserts.

Chefs' access to all of these fine ingredients is a large slice of proof that Kent can offer the best and most varied à la carte menus in the UK.

If variety be the spice of life, then Kent is seriously hot for food-lovers. Having no limits to what is available to customers means that daily special dishes are commonplace here, allowing for expression of ideas from our culinary geniuses.

From curry houses to nouvelle cuisine, Kent can compete with the best because of the rich resources available.

This choice allows Kent chefs to create the finest dishes for their menus, in turn allowing customers to salivate over the most glorious à la carte treats.

Gurkha Palace Folkestone

Why here...

Try an authentic taste of Nepal with regional cuisines. The food of this beautiful country is as diverse as the landscape, so it's no surprise to learn that Gurkha Palace's menu is vast.

On the menu...

Excellent food – nominated as best Nepalese restaurant in the country by The Good Food Guide. Highly commended by Channel Chamber and best customer-service award.

How to book...

London Beach Ashford

Why here...

London Beach offers one of the best à la carte menus in the Garden of England. The menu changes on a regular basis to coincide with the seasons and produce available.

The team prides itself on only serving Kentish produce in its dishes.

The sophisticated restaurant has a relaxed ambience with beautiful panoramic views across the open countryside of the stunning Weald of Kent.

On the menu...

Local game terrine, with home-made chutney and toasted pistachio nuts followed by pan-roasted venison steak with puy lentils, fondant potato, braised red cabbage and a mustard jus. Steamed syrup sponge pudding with vanilla crème anglaise.

World's Wonder Warehorne

Why here...

The World's Wonder sits in a beautiful area of countryside and offers a true rural eating experience.

The pub is just a short walk from Romney Marsh, sitting between Hamstreet and Tenterden.

It has a more modern-looking façade these days, but hiding behind it is a history that reaches back more than a century.

The Valentine's night special – three courses for two people – costs just £39.95.

On the menu...

The food is both cooked on the premises and sourced locally, with free-range meat and poultry all supplied by a local farmer. All dishes are home-made, including the famous steak-and-kidney pie and rabbit-and-bacon pie. Vegetarian options are available.

How to book...

Jazz sax triumvirate will warm the tone Alan Barnes and pals

RAFA Club, Dock Road, Chatham
Friday, February 17, 8.30pm
Tickets £10
01634 365352

THE new season of jazz gigs at the RAFA Club is just the antidote to all those long winter blues. It starts with a multi-saxophone storming session from three of the best saxophonists on the UK scene. Alan Barnes has become one of the most popular of the younger generation of British players headlining clubs, concerts and festivals all over the world.

He has won many prestigious jazz awards for his musicianship on the alto, tenor and baritone saxes and he now runs his own successful Woodville record company.

The irrepressible Tracey Mendham also plays on the day, notable for her similar style to past masters Dexter Gordon and Sonny Rollins. Mick Foster makes up the triumvirate; he is widely known for his musicianship and improvising skills on the baritone sax.

Pirates or princesses? The adventure begins

Hop Farm, Paddock Wood
Saturday, February 11, to Sunday, February 19
01622 870804; www.thehopfarm.co.uk

THE Hop Farm Family Park starts the half-term holiday with Pirates And Princesses Week. Youngsters can strap themselves in for a swashbuckling adventure or a princess pampering during this week of fun-filled activities, just perfect for under-11s.

All budding Jack Sparrows or promising Snow Whites can dress up and visit the attraction. The pirates and princesses can pit their wits against each other in a showdown of activities to decide once and for all the ultimate winner. Events include the giant jumping pillows, the children's driving school, indoor and outdoor play areas, animal farm and the magic factory... along with so much more.

Go kart-crazy this half-term Turn up'n'drive

Buckmore Park, Chatham
Monday to Sunday, 9am-6pm
01634 201562
www.buckmore4kids.co.uk

FOR fun that's fast and furious, you can't beat karting. To experience the thrill of real outdoor karting, head for Chatham's award-winning Buckmore Park with its 1,000-metre international outdoor kart circuit, just off junction 3 of the M2. British world champions Lewis Hamilton and Jenson Button both learnt their trade at the circuit, which celebrates its 50th anniversary next year. The floodlit venue is organising Turn Up'n'Drive sessions for youngsters aged four to 16 on selected dates including during the half-term week. The kids' karting parties offer either 30-minute or one-hour sessions available for up to 12 drivers and can incorporate a celebration meal.

www.lilfordgallery.com

A NEW gallery dedicated to contemporary art has opened in Palace Street, Canterbury. Following success with his art boutique in Castle Street, David Lilford has opened this second gallery, which offers far more space for his pieces to be shown to their best effect. Lilford opened his Castle Street gallery in July 2000 stocking works ranging from just a few hundred pounds up to £50,000 or more. The new gallery will have pieces from Kent artists like Billy Childish as well as work from such names as Banksy, Tracey Emin and Damien Hirst. Lilford said: "People are welcome to drop in to see what's being displayed even if they are not in the market to buy. There aren't many places in the area where you can view some of the most famous artists in the UK."

The records of John Peel ... and more

Gulbenkian Theatre, Canterbury
Tuesday, February 28
www.kent.ac.uk/gulbenkian

IN 2002, student John Osborne won a competition on John Peel's Radio One show, bagging a box of records that took eight years to listen to. He has since produced a show that had a sell-out run at the Edinburgh Festival and has been described as an ode to radio and anyone who's ever sought solace in wireless. Entitled John Peel's Shed, the production is based on Osborne's acclaimed debut novel Radio Head: Up And Down The Dial Of British Radio. It tells the story of when the writer decided to listen to a different radio station every day, all day, for a month. The show features rare records previously owned by Peel. AS we enter the year of the London Olympics, a new show is touring Kent in celebration. The play, entitled Running For Glory, explores the personalities and events leading up to the 1924 Paris Olympics, when a group of British athletes blazed their way to glory. Written by Philip Dart, the show offers a blend of theatre and sporting spectacle, re-creating the excitement of an Olympic race. It plays at Selling Hall, near Faversham, on Tuesday, February 28; Hartlip Hall, near Sittingbourne, on Saturday, March 3; Rodmersham Hall, near Sittingbourne, on Thursday, March 8; and Higham Memorial Hall, near Rochester, on Sunday, March 25.

Radar buildings go under the hammer at auction

AN unusual piece of Second World War military heritage has come on to the property market.

RAF Dunkirk was part of a chain of five radar stations built after 1937 to provide early warning for the Thames estuary and the south-eastern approaches to London.

All stations were in the Canterbury and Faversham area.

The outposts were vital in directing RAF fighters to formations of incoming German bombers, playing a key part in the Battle of Britain and the defeat of the Luftwaffe.

The property is on offer for £135,000 - £140,000 and will be auctioned by Clive Emson at the company's conference centre at the County Showground, Detling.

The sale starts at 11am on Monday, February 20.

Kevin Gilbert is part of the team working on the sale.

"It's part of a 26-acre site and includes a range of buildings, such as a transmitter block, technical block, several pillboxes, the radar tower base itself and an underground transmitter room," he said.

"The whole area is currently in the possession of trustees and has been for some time. As the building is a Scheduled Monument, whoever bought it would need to be sympathetic when it came to any changes."

When the station was operational, it included weapons for defence. Now long gone, these included an anti-aircraft tower housing a 40mm Bofors gun, while further fire could be directed from a tripod-mounted

Lewis machine gun. Gas-proof doors once protected the interior, which also included an airlock – built when it was feared that poison gas might be dropped on targets in England by Nazi bombers.

Such was the position of the station that it could detect approaching aircraft even before they left the French coast.

"It is certainly an unusual property," said Mr Gilbert. "It could be turned into a museum – after all, it was strategically very important in the Second World War."

New homes are on the horizon

A NEW collection of family houses and apartments is available at Countryside Properties' Horizon development in Gravesend, providing easy access for commuters into London.

Horizon is close to the centre of Gravesend and commuting into central London takes just 23 minutes by train. There are also excellent road connections via the A2 and M25 to London, other Kent towns and the coast.

The Homes and Communities Agency's FirstBuy, an equity loan scheme to help first-time buyers get on the property ladder, is available on all the new homes at Horizon.

This means eligible first-time buyers can purchase 100 per cent of their new property for 80 per cent of the purchase price and they need a deposit of just 5 per cent with a 75 per cent mortgage.

Houses have been priced at affordable levels for the development. FirstBuy prices at Horizon One start at just £79,960 for a one-bedroom apartment, while house prices start at £128,400 for a house with two bedrooms and £140,000 for three bedrooms.

it's property for Kent

WHITE House is an attractive four-bedroom family home set in pretty gardens with lovely sea views, enjoying an elevated position in the popular area of Cliff Road, Hythe.

It is a detached property believed to have been built around 1928, with colour-washed elevations, under a tiled roof.

It is on the market with chartered surveyors Smith-Woolley & Perry for £425,000.

Sally Jinks, of Smith-Woolley & Perry, said: "The property has been extended in recent years to create a utility room, breakfast room and a fourth bedroom – with the potential to create a shower room on the first floor – subject to the necessary planning consents."

The accommodation comprises a covered verandah, entrance vestibule and reception hall; sitting room with an attractive and contemporary living-flame gas-fire; dining room with cupboard and shelves in the chimney recess and an alcove with fitted book-shelves. A kitchen, breakfast room, utility room and convenient cloakroom complete the ground floor.

On the first floor is a landing with a built-in linen cupboard and a master bedroom with built-in wardrobe cupboards and a centre chest-of-drawers unit. There are three further bedrooms and a family bathroom (with a bath and shower cubicle) and separate WC.

There is a double garage with an electric up-and-over door and a door to the garden.

There is a delightful garden both to the front and rear of the property. Starting from the bottom level, shallow steps lead through the garden and up to a lovely patio area to the front of the house overlooking the garden towards the sea.

The lawn sweeps either side of the pathway, with attractive borders providing mature planting and foliage. A neat private hedge creates a tiny border to the garden.

A path leads around to the rear garden and a further patio next to the house, and a raised lawn accessed via a few steps, with a further incline accessing the very top of the garden, which allows a pleasant glimpse of the sea.

Property is simply a bit of all White

Rare opportunity to enjoy village life with 'green' views

AN EXTENDED four-bedroom detached family home with excellent 'green' credentials in the sought-after village of Sheldwich, near Faversham, has come on to the market with Saddlers Residential.

The property at 4 Hunters Way is believed to have been built during the 1960s, with a later extension to provide true family-sized accommodation including an entrance hall, downstairs cloakroom, sitting room with wood-burning stove, dining room and contemporary fitted kitchen breakfast room, study, master bedroom with balcony overlooking the rear garden and en-suite bathroom, three further bedrooms and a family bathroom.

The property benefits from landscaped and productive front and rear gardens totalling one-fifth of an acre, along with off-road parking and a single garage to the side.

The present owners have taken care to integrate energy-saving facilities within the property, including a rainwater-harvesting system, along with provision for the addition of solar panels to assist with the hot-water system.

Other notable features include sealed-unit double-glazing to most windows and gas-fired central heating.

Sheldwich, a delightfully pretty village with a respected primary school, is some three miles south of Faversham and 10 miles north of Ashford, both with an excellent array of shopping and leisure facilities and mainline railway stations providing fast access to London and the coast.

Fast road networks are easily accessible by car, with junction 6 of the M2 just 1.5 miles to the north, providing access to the capital and north Kent coast.

The village is in a designated Area of Outstanding Natural Beauty.

Properties rarely become available for purchase in this village and it is strongly urged that interested applicants make arrangements to view to avoid disappointment.

BMW dealers across Kent are using this weekend to launch the latest generation of the German premium marque's best-known model, – the BMW 3-Series saloon.

Not surprisingly, Generation Six has already gained a lot of attention according to Sam Pitchford, sales manager for Broad Oak BMW at Ashford: "There's been a huge pre-launch interest from private and fleet customers – a new 3-Series is recognised as one of our biggest events and the press has done a good job in whipping things up."

He added: "The key model, of course, is the 320d diesel (from £28,080) which has been the best seller for several generations now – we have a 320d demonstrator of the new car here – but the pick for me in terms of the classic BMW driving experience would be the 328 four-cylinder turbo petrol model (from £29,060) – it's smooth, quick and lovely to drive."

Sadly, we weren't able to try the latter, but Broad Oak's 320d diesel was made available just hours before the launch event and was impressive in its own right, proving BMW has taken on board a number of quibbles about the previous car.

Most notable is the suspension work done to deliver a smoother ride to compete with the 3-Series' closest true rival, the similarly rear-wheel drive Mercedes-Benz C-Class, but BMW has also improved rear legroom and cabin space overall.

Best of all though, the designers have smoothed away the last vestiges of the controversial Chris Bangle design era and created a car that is stylish yet easy on the eye, with a particularly smart front end that makes the car look lower and wider.

Even the 'workhorse' 320d sampled here – surely destined to be the biggest seller once again – demonstrates how levels of driver pleasure have been taken higher, with a smooth and free-revving diesel, slick six-speed gearbox and good steering feedback.

But BMW has also cleverly embraced economy and the environment within its 'Ultimate Driving Machine' ethos, so the new car features the latest of the marque's Efficient Dynamics technology to deliver both urban economy and smooth motorway efficiency so cruising in sixth at 70mph shows the onboard computer reading a tad under 80mpg – not bad for a car that seats five in comfort.

With that kind of economy on tap for company user choosers as well as discerning private buyers, there can't be any doubt the latest 3-Series will retain the model's perennial Top 10 slot in the UK's best-selling car chart.

The model's history dates from 1975, but it was the 1982 E30 model that UK buyers really took to, especially when spin-offs included a desirable convertible and Touring (estate) – we await news of generation six versions of these and the two-door coupe.

Launch weekend for BMW's best-known car, the 3-Series

STYLISH: The latest incarnation of the BMW 3-Series is easy on the eye, while also offering excellent mpg

DON'T LIKE

THERE'S nothing to dislike. This marks a return to classic 3-Series style and impact while pushing the green envelope still further

NOT SURE

IT will get an easy ride this time, though, from vastly-improved Audi A4, Mercedes-Benz C-Class and Volvo S60 rivals

REALLY LIKE

THE flattened BMW grille, which allows a much more dynamic front end and sets the tone for a smart overall shape

'Upspec' Corsa makes case to be a downsizer's target

By Sam Davison

editorial@kosmedia.co.uk

IT'S hard to believe that the current Vauxhall Corsa has been around since 2006.

But it was ahead of the pack then, and an eye-catching youth-orientated marketing campaign added to the impression that the car was a trend-setter rather than a follower.

Whether it's still on trend now is debatable as it passes into the later phase of its production life, but it remains a perennial UK best seller.

Of course, part of this is due to Vauxhall's clout in the company car and fleet sector; go down to your local car hire chain and a Corsa will be one of the best options early on the menu.

But one thing the Corsa also does well, is offering bigger car sophistication and style for private buyers, exemplified by the five-door 1.2 petrol model tested here in upmarket SXi trim.

The cabin of the Corsa is a masterpiece of spatial design, with the five-door doing a particularly good job of aping many cars from the family hatchback class above. It will even seat five without too much of a squeeze on the middle passenger in the back, while head and legroom is good for this class.

It might look drab, but the interior is also of good robust quality, well arranged, and practical, with lots of stowage in the front – though not so good in the back.

The boot is large and ours came with the optional £60 double-deck boot – a removable false floor accesses hidden depths or, if needed, a lidded space for ever-present gear needed on your journeys. The rear seats fold easily to create a useful cubic cargo area as well.

The Corsa delivers on the road with a nicely balanced blend of comfort and sharp handling. Keen drivers won't be disappointed by the car and the sporty models are a delight, including the flagship VXR hot hatch.

Power choice is a bit of a mixed bag though. I

A GOOD OFFERING:

Even the diesel version of Corsa's latest incarnation is worth a look would normally argue against paying extra to have a diesel supermini unless you plan to rack up lots of miles and don't mind the inevitable loss of sharpness in handling due to the lump's extra weight.

It makes sense in the Corsa though – particularly in the case of the green Ecolife models – with previous tests showing the diesel powertrains to be among the best at this level.

However, if you are going for petrol then the four-cylinder 85PS (83bhp) 1.2-litre of the test car makes a powerful case, being more in the real world than the asthmatic and rather uneven three-cylinder 65PS 1.0-litre, and almost as lively as the 100PS 1.4 unit.

Ours also had a green package on it in the form of an eco button that helps you save fuel and nags your gear changes.

It also comes with a start/stop feature that kills the engine and automatically re-starts it in city driving or traffic jams to save on fuel and emissions.

With care, this should then allow you to return an average mpg in the 50s, although it is sometimes hard to resist switching off eco mode and giving the little car its head in cut and thrust traffic or on a challenging road, the SXi model also benefits from slightly tauter suspension.

Add in a few of the SXi standard features, such as smart and well-contoured front seats, leather clad steering wheel with audio controls, cruise control, aux/USB MP3 player socket, climate control and smart alloys, and you can understand why an up-spec Corsa might be on someone's target list when downsizing from a bigger class of car.

MOTORING NEWS

Bigger Fiat 500 at large

FIAT has unveiled a big brother for the 500, hoping to benefit from association with the Italian cult car.

The 500L – the L simply stands for Large – is due out late this year and underlines Fiat's ongoing strategy for brand extensions based on its big-selling star – a hot Abarth 500 and trendy 500C convertible are already on sale.

Extra clout for people-carriers

TWO of the most versatile models in the Citroën range have been upgraded by the French marque.

The revised Berlingo Multispace and Dispatch Combi people carriers go on sale from April 2. Both have new look front ends and interiors.

Both also follow a familiar pattern of being flexible and cost-effective spin-offs from successful and durable van models.

Smartening up the Smart

FOR many the original city car, the Smart ForTwo has been extensively revised for the 2012 model year.

Described as "more dynamic", the styling features a larger radiator grille with integrated logo, LED daytime driving lights, muscular side skirts and other tweaks to give the little two-seater a more butch look.

The new-look car hits UK showrooms in April.

World first shows pride at Lion brand

1ST DRIVE

By Sam Davison
editorial@kosmedia.co.uk

AS Peugeot spokesman Andrew Didlick said when introducing the French marque's new 3008 Hybrid4 to journalists – it's not often one gets to reveal a world first.

But that's what this clever new vehicle is: the first ever hybrid car to harness a diesel rather than a petrol engine in tandem with an electric motor, thereby bringing the diesel benefits of better fuel economy and low-down pulling power.

Behind this obvious attribute, though, is the ingenious way Peugeot has created a platform whereby this same system could be adapted quickly to fit any number of existing or future Peugeot powertrains.

This has been achieved by producing a stand alone electric power module – Peugeot has considerable experience in the field from producing the electric 106 supermini variant in the 90s – for the rear of the car.

This can link to whatever internal combustion partner Peugeot chooses to site at the front of the vehicle; we can expect to see a classy but green version of its bigger 508 series soon and there are other options in the pipeline.

For now, we have a version of the highly successful 3008 crossover that is even more versatile than the donor, something of a Swiss Army Knife of cars that can be: all-electric; low emis-

BIG IMPACT: The 3008 Hybrid4 – the pride of Peugeot. Above, this is where you select the various tools on the 'Swiss Army Knife Car' way, with its clever £300 electronic Grip Control option on the front wheels, but the electric motor transmission to the rear wheels of the Hybrid4 make all-wheel drive a reality and effective enough for most people who buy a 4x4, unless serious cross-country yomping is called for.

At the other extreme, the car can be used in purely electric mode at modest speeds and local runs, with the batteries being recharged slightly every time you lift off the throttle – you soon get used to seldom needing the brakes, which should pay dividends on maintenance too.

I was also unable to discern any impact upon the standard 3008's versatility, due to the batteries and electric power at the back so, like the Swiss Army Knife, the Hybrid4 truly really is a tool for all occasions and seasons.

sion sub 100g/km CO₂; four-wheel drive; sporty – 200bhp on tap; roomy – taking five adults plus luggage; and economical – averaging 70mpg.

As you might expect, such things do not come cheap: prices start at £26,995 for the ultra-eco, road tax and congestion charge exempt version – conventional 3008 diesels start at £18,995.

On the other hand, Peugeot is pitching the 3008 as an executive model so the car has been visually upgraded against 'standard' 3008s and even the cheapest version comes laden with kit, and there are potentially huge savings on running costs and tax.

Peugeot figures comparing the car to its nearest conventional 3008 equivalent suggest a company car user chooser could save £7,558 over three years, with a further £1,500 saving in London Congestion Charge fees if they commute to the capital.

And the Hybrid4 has more sporting character than any previous hybrid, with perhaps the exception of the rather more expensive and bigger Lexus 450h petrol hybrid (from £44,500).

One of the most intriguing aspects is its ability to tackle quite difficult conditions. Peugeot already had this covered off with the 3008 any-

Kent's Paralympic Countdown

Raising awareness is not on the agenda for captain Brown

By David Pritchard

david.pritchard@archant.co.uk

ONE of the expected consequences from London 2012 is a transformation in disability sports, which will receive unprecedented exposure during the Paralympics.

Organisers hope the Games will provide a watershed moment which will fundamentally alter the public's view of events which, if not completely ignored, are often misunderstood.

Britain is hugely successful, finishing second in the medals table at Beijing, and a gold rush is widely predicted again this year.

As captain of Britain's wheelchair rugby team, Steve Brown is well placed to pick up a medal in September, but for him the priority is about the battle to become a champion rather than any loftier ambitions of representing disability sport.

"I'm not interested in changing perceptions," he said. "I go past thousands of people on the street every day and I don't know anything about them. That doesn't mean that what they do isn't worth knowing, or isn't courageous or inspiring or exciting."

"As far as people knowing me or knowing wheelchair rugby, I do this because I want to and I'm proud of what I do. I like the excitement and the adrenalin and the competition. Before my injury I was a competitive, horrible, older brother and nothing's changed."

"I want to win whatever's being played. I race my brothers with lolly sticks down the river and if mine doesn't win I'll still make an excuse. That doesn't change because I've had this injury."

"I'm just fortunate wheelchair rugby's there for me to have a sport I can be competitive in on a level playing field. I owe an awful lot to the sport, on and off the court."

EYES ON THE PRIZE: Steve Brown is captain of the GB wheelchair rugby team for the Paralympics

STEVE BROWN

- AGE: 30
- HOMETOWN: Sittingbourne
- EVENT: Wheelchair rugby
- CAREER HIGHLIGHT: Being named Great Britain wheelchair rugby captain last year
- PARALYMPIC SELECTION CHANCES: Probable

from a balcony in 2005, Brown has gone on to become a key member of the Britain squad.

Appointed captain last year, the 30-year-old from Sittingbourne led a team depleted by injury to silver at the European Championships last October.

The sport has captured the imagination and was the first Paralympic event to sell out, meaning 10,000 spectators will watch their games – a record for wheelchair rugby.

Brown is delighted with the squad's preparations to date and praised the spirit among the players, who will not all make the final cut.

He said: "I want Great Britain to win with me in the squad, it's the same for everyone, but there's no animosity. If I don't make it all I want is the best for the others and I know the feeling's mutual for the other players."

"To win a medal with your best friends, people you've been working with day-in day-out – the trust, respect and understanding you have to show – and knowing everyone's worked as hard as they can, would be so rewarding."

DECIDER: Futsal was the first final played

Final countdown as Kent School Games begin 2012 party

THE finals in the third Kent School Games have begun and promise to be on a grander scale than before in Olympic year.

More than 30,000 children across the county will have taken part in 36 sports by the time it finishes in July, making it the largest of its kind in Europe.

The biennial games arose from the desire to capitalise on the Olympics coming to the capital and the success since its launch in 2008 has seen it become a model for similar schemes nationwide.

Kent County Council's Chris Hespe, who helped develop the Kent School Games from the outset, said: "The whole idea of the Kent School Games is a legacy of having the Olympics in London. We're going to be running it every two years and it's made a big impact already."

After regional heats last year the sports are down to the latter stages.

Futsal, a version of indoor football, was the first to be decided, with the finals held last week. Hayesbrook School in Tonbridge won the boys' under-12 event, while Dartford Grammar won the girls' under-12s. Walderslade Girls won the under-14 title.

Mahmood off to IPL season

AZHAR Mahmood will miss the start of the cricket season with Kent after the all-rounder was bought in the auction for the Indian Premier League.

The 36-year-old former Pakistan international went for US$200,000, twice his base price, to Kings XI Punjab.

Mahmood thanked Kent and the England and Wales Cricket Board on Twitter for being "accommodating and co-operative" in allowing the lucrative deal to take place.

The IPL begins on April 4, the day before Kent start their LV= County Championship Division Two campaign.

Depending on results, Mahmood could be away for almost two months, with the IPL final held on May 27.

Pain of losing Junior World Cup final burns bright for Ransom in back-to-back Grand Slam attempt

AS THE end to a successful England Under-20 career approaches Ben Ransom admits a defeat last summer is providing a source of inspiration during the Six Nations.

The former Tonbridge School pupil helped the side off to a terrific start last weekend, as Scotland were crushed 59-3 in Glasgow.

It put Ransom and the rest of the squad on their way to a second successive Grand Slam ahead of a trip to Italy on Friday night.

The full-back turns 20 next week so will not be eligible for the team next season. Despite the glory he enjoyed in the Six Nations 12 months ago, it is the 33-22 defeat to New Zealand at the Junior World Cup last June which stands out.

He said: "Winning the Grand Slam and then doing well in the Junior World Cup were great moments, but losing in the final spurs me on."

"Obviously last year our goal was to win the Grand Slam. It's a different team this year and we'll just be taking it one game at a time."

After the end of his international under-20 career next month Ransom will turn his attention to developing in club rugby.

The former Kent player made his full debut for Saracens aged just 18 but has been used sparingly over the last year.

He is likely to finish the season playing in the Championship for Bedford Blues, who have signed him on a dual registration deal.

Ransom is looking forward to featuring for the promotion hopefuls, which should provide a useful stepping stone to establishing himself at Saracens.

He said: "Playing regularly is the priority to get some game time under my belt. First of all I have to do well at Bedford and then the aim is to get into the rotation for the Saracens first-team."

"Saracens is a great club to be at – it's hard work but the set-up is really good."

Trophy silver for GB ladies

NATALIE Seymour and Abi Walker were unused substitutes as Great Britain's women lost in the Champions Trophy final to hosts Argentina.

Silvina D'Elia scored the only goal of the game after 29 minutes to claim the gold medal in Rosario last Sunday.

Despite ending in disappointment, the silver medal was the team's best ever finish at a world level event, which augurs well six months before the London Olympics.

Seymour and Walker, who play club hockey for Canterbury ladies, had played a role in helping Great Britain finish second in Pool B, with Seymour playing in the quarter-final victory against Korea.

HYTHE TOWN V SITTINGBOURNE:
Kick-off 3pm Saturday at Reachfields

Recruitment proves tricky as Brickies take on Hythe

By Fred Atkins

sports@kosmedia.co.uk

JOE Dowley continued to scour his contacts book for potential new signings ahead of Sittingbourne's derby at Hythe Town this weekend.

The Sittingbourne manager is optimistic he can reinforce his squad but has been repeatedly thwarted during the past seven days, with several targets unavailable or too expensive.

"It's a difficult time of year to be bringing players in," he said. "Most of the players we've spoken to are happy where they are and are playing regularly. Money's also an issue, although the chairman [Andy Spice] has said there is money available for signings if needed."

Although the luckless Jack Hooper looks like he will be out for the season with the knee injury he aggravated during an abortive comeback against Whitehawk, there was some good news for Dowley. The rest of his squad have been given a clean bill of health, meaning the Brickies will otherwise be at full strength for the Ryman Division One South game at Reachfields.

Hythe, who will be without their experienced skipper Dave Cook as he serves a four-game suspension, are a team Dowley knows well.

"I watched them last week at Ebbsfleet in the Kent Senior Cup," he said. "I've been playing with Aaron Lacy since I was about 17 and I also know Brendon Cass and Nick Reeves. It should be a good game. We need three points and hopefully we can get them. We were a bit unlucky not to get anything when we last played them."

STRONG: Kent League champions Hythe Town beat Sittingbourne at Bourne Park in November

When the teams last met at Bourne Park in November, Hythe ran out 2-1 winners, thanks to two goals early in the second half from Cass.

Like virtually every other game in the county last week, Sittingbourne's home fixture with Corinthian Casual was postponed and they were also forced to abandon plans to train on Tuesday night due to snow on the Bourne Park pitch.

The Corinthian game will now be played on Tuesday, February 28.

Sittingbourne were awarded the Ryman Division One South performance-of-the-month award for January for their 2-0 win over Whitehawk, when they ground out a wholly unexpected win against a team who would have been top of the table but for a points deduction.

RUGBY UNION

Depleted Sheppey have one eye on postponement

AFTER the big freeze wiped out Sheppey's London 3 South East fixture with Maidstone last Saturday, their coach Pete Olliver could be forgiven for hoping this weekend's rearranged game goes the same way.

The Islanders will be without key players if the weather abates and the game goes ahead at Maidstone's Mote ground on Saturday (kick-off 2.30pm).

"I can't see it being on myself," said Olliver.

"We've got to prepare for any outcome, but the weather forecast is for it to be freezing and it wouldn't be a bad thing if it was because it was supposed to be a free weekend and a lot of our lads have got tickets to the international games."

Number 8 Dylan Davies is definitely unavailable, but Sheppey can draw encouragement from the result the last time these sides met, when they beat Maidstone 17-5 at The Ditch in October.

But despite the win, Olliver played down the significance of the result.

"Maidstone always attract some good players," he said.

"They had 50 points deducted last year, came down a division and probably should have won this league."

"They didn't have the best of starts, but they're starting to show their true form now."

Sittingbourne suffered the same fate as their near-rivals when frozen pitches wiped out the entire Kent 1 fixture list last weekend.

They will try to get the meeting with HSBC at The Grove on again this Saturday (kick-off 2.30pm), although it could be another frustrating weekend spent kicking their heels if the weather remains as forecast.

ERITH & BELVEDERE V WOODSTOCK SPORTS:

Kick-off 3pm Saturday at Park View Road

Woodstock's final odds drop following useful cup draw

THE draw for the semi-finals of the Kent League Premier Division Cup has been kind to Woodstock Sports, pairing them with Corinthian, the lowest-placed team left in the competition.

Sports will have been relieved to have avoided the league's runaway leaders Herne Bay, who have been drawn with VCD Athletic.

Woodstock will play the first leg at home at a date to be confirmed.

They made it through to the last four following last Monday's dramatic 5-4 aggregate win over Erith Town, overturning a 1-0 deficit from the first leg, despite only having 13 fit players for the second leg.

This weekend Woodstock play a rearranged fixture away to Erith & Belvedere without the services of the former Sittingbourne and Maidstone striker Lynden Rowland, who is suspended.

The game was originally scheduled for last Saturday, but a frozen pitch at Park View Road forced its postponement.

With the entire league programme falling victim to the elements, the Kent League decided to rearrange its schedule in a bid to keep its member clubs playing as regularly as possible.

Woodstock will now play Fisher Athletic at home on Saturday, February 18, instead of travelling to Corinthian in the league.

NON-LEAGUE FOOTBALL FOCUS WITH FRED ATKINS

A question of class warfare

“THE most depressing thing I've ever read about football came in the otherwise compelling book Why England Lose, by Simon Kuper and Stefan Szymanski, a collaboration between the football correspondent of the Financial Times and an economist.

It contained a number of unconventional themes, from the reasons behind the national team's failures, through the mathematics of penalty shoot-outs to the wavering sanity of club directors and is a must-read for anyone thinking of running or even supporting a team.

There was, however, a passage that made the heart sink quicker than a DJ armed with a copy of Red, Red Wine at a wedding reception, concerning a former Oldham trainee who was ridiculed by his peers because he once came to training with a copy of the Daily Mail.

There is a school of thought that says if you've parted with cash for a newspaper that believes the EU causes global warming (I paraphrase) you deserve everything you get, but somewhat incredibly the derision the player faced was because his team mates thought he was trying to be intellectual.

According to their research, 85 per cent of England players at the previous three world cups were working class and the authors' theory is England's football culture scares away middle-class players, who instead opt for rugby or cricket.

Could this explain why Kent, a predominantly middle-class county, produces so few top-flight footballers?

Probably not. The playing pool in Kent includes stockbrokers and dockers, shift workers and successful businessmen.

Supporters also come from fairly mixed backgrounds, though one did tell me he thought an ex-Tonbridge player was amusing because: "Everywhere he played he'd get into arguments and start abusing his opponent in a really middle class way."

On the field it's admittedly rare to come across a player who sounds like he's been to RADA, but you don't really need to worry about your diction when all you've got to do is shout things like "second ball" and "big winners" for 90 minutes.

Some fans remain stuck in the middle-class closet however. I once introduced an Ipswich-supporting university friend to a friend of mine from Maidstone who followed West Ham. On the face of it they had a fair amount in common in terms of background, education and mutual interests and they appeared to get on.

The former was entirely comfortable about being 'out' as middle class and went on to work for the television station of one of the biggest clubs in the world.

"Don't your mate know a lot about football for a posh bloke?" was the verdict of the latter who went on to become a boxing writer, but only after coming to terms with the fact he'd been raised in a three-bedroomed semi in Allington and not a high-rise in Canning Town.

We understand that fitness should be part of your life style, not all of it.

We offer something completely different when it comes to health and wellbeing: a boutique environment, first class service, incredible value for money and a realistic outlook on life.

Our fun and friendly fitness classes are tailored to meet your needs, our gyms feature the latest state of the art equipment to help you build your perfect shape, while our health-enhancing pool and spa facilities ensure that you get that well deserved 'me time' when you need it most.
